Federal Quiz Of Sabotage In Army Air Mail Ordered

Roosevelt Demands Full Inquiry Into Six Fatal Crashes.

Dern Told Pilots Face Blacklisting

Washington Airport Base Abandoned; Planes Use Bolling Field.

By Martha Dalrymple.

On investigaion into charges of sabotage of Army Air Corps airplanes carrying the United States air mail has been ordered at the request of President Roosevelt, said Secretary of War Dern last night.

Reports of punctured gas tanks, controls being tampered with, and the presence of water in gasoline in Army plane tanks are being thoroughly investigated, said the War Department head. He added that, although he did not believe in the truth of such information, he had nevertheless ordered a complete inquiry.

Included in the information which the War Department is seeking to verify is that commercial pilots, 75 per cent of whom are members of the Air Corps Reserve, are being threatened with blacklisting if they accept positions piloting the Army planes.

Since the Army took over the mails six pilots have been killed and six have been injured and approximately 20 planes have been wrecked. All these accidents occurred during the first week of the service. Although there have been several forced down this week there have been no fatalities.

Silent on Crash Causes.

During the two weeks the air mail has been under its supervision, War Department officials have been reticent to assign reasons for the accidents to Army pilots.

There has been known to be a generally hostile feeling among Army men toward the so-called "defenders" of the service who claim that, by canceling mail contracts with private companies and transferring the mail service to the Army, the Administration has been indirectly responsible for the deaths.

Secretary Dern said he had heard all the charges of sabotage, tampering, and even destruction, but frankly did not believe them.

"I consider these fantastic tales But nevertheless we are investigating all of them."

Three days ago the War Department occasioned considerable surprise when it ordered the Army mail planes to abandon the Washington Airport as headquarters and use Bolling Field, the Army reservation, instead.

The only explanation vouchsafed at the time the change was ordered was that the gasoline supply for Army planes was at Bolling Field and necessitated the planes flying on to Bolling after they discharged their mail bags at Washington Airport.

Before the private contracts were canceled, the commercial planes, in addition to the Army machines, used Washington airport.

Richmond Base Moved.

The Army air mail base at Richmond also has been ordered moved to Bolling Field, according to Capt. C. B. Haynes, who has been in charge of the service there. Capt. Haynes attributed the move to inadequate facilities at that base.

A few days ago Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, ordered all pursuit planes of the P26 type grounded. No indication of the reason for the order was given. The planes are Boeings, the same type in which an Army pilot crashed in Texas recently.

The investigation follows closely upon conferences held at the White House among Government officials concerned with air mail. It is understood the Administration's policy on mail contracts, mainly the question of turning the mails back to private companies, has been under discussion.

The reports of sabotage, it is believed, reached the President during these conferences, and he requested that the matter be exhaustively studied.

Gen. Foulois, who is in charge of the investigation, is expected to make a preliminary report to the President the first of next week.

4,000 to Get Jobs Back at 1929 Level

Aluminum Firm Parley Ends "Holiday."

Pittsburgh, March 2 (AP).—Vice President I. W. Wilson, of the Aluminum Co. of America, announced tonight an agreement has been reached with representatives of the concern's 4,000 employes, who are "on holiday," by which they will return to work and receive 11 per cent increase in their hourly pay.

The increase, effective only in the New Kensington district, restores wages to "approximately the 1929 levels," Wilson said.

Four unions, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, were represented at the conference of the workers' committee and the com-

Cutters Carve Ice to Succor 3,120 on Isles

Ships Also Marooned in Bay Floes; Traffic at Standstill.

Crisfield, Md., March 2 (Spl.), Dense fog and crumbling ice continued to paralyze ship, motor and airplane traffic throughout Chesapeake Bay regions today.

Laden with provisions here this morning, three Coast Guard patrol boats prepared for a dash to Tangier and Smith Islands, whose 3,120 inhabitants have been cut off from food supplies since Monday, when a mail boat, leaving from Crisfield with a load of food and fuel, was unable to cut its way through the 12-inch ice. All later efforts to reach the islands have been unsuccessful.

The Smith Island mail boat, also loaded with fuel and provisions, followed the cutters.

Seven ocean-bound vessels were forced to drop anchor owing to the thick fog, and the barge Hanover II was reported still aground on Sollers Point with a crew of three aboard. Coast Guard cutters have been unable to free the barge and anxiety was expressed that breaking ice would open her seams.

Mist May Melt Ice.

Old-timers along the bay welcomed heavy mists as ice-dispersers, predicting that they would soften the ice, the worst on the bay in 15 years, if rising temperature continues.

Capt. Kirwin, Maritime Exchange observer at North Point, said a ship had anchored near his observation station, but he could not identify her. Other vessels passed his station slowly.

Mail Liners Plow Through.

Norfolk, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Eight Coast Guard boats are in Chesapeake Bay assisting vessels caught in the ice, Coast Guard headquarters announced today.

Ice conditions in the bay showed little improvement today, except that more floes were in evidence.

A number of vessels caught in the ice near Baltimore were finding their way out through efforts of the Coast Guard boats and the powerful Baltimore Mail Line steamers City of Hamburg and City of Baltimore. The former broke through the ice on her way to Norfolk and the latter made a trip from here to Baltimore. A number of icebound craft followed the two mail liners and managed to get into clear water.

At Chincoteague a cutter broke a channel for seven fishing boats, which went to sea to engage in fishing. The fishermen had been held in the ice more than two weeks and had been unable to provide a living for their families. The Coast Guard supplied provisions to the most needy families, and additional supplies will be sent before Sunday, under Treasury Department orders.

Killer Kidnaps Girl, 2, After Dual Murder

Father of Missing Babe Quizzed; Mother and Grandmother Dead.

Dallas, Tex., March 2 (AP).—The 2-year-old girl, Martya Julia Boggess, was abducted late today by a slayer who shot to death her mother and grandmother, Mrs. Gladys Boggess, 38, and Mrs. Julia Woodward, 76.

Mrs. Boggess was the estranged wife of Giles S. (Jack) Boggess, 43, of Bonham, who was taken in custody later for questioning.

Investigators said they learned two youths were in the car, in which was a man believed to be the killer, that left the home of Mrs. Boggess' sister, Mrs. W. H. Fortson, where the shooting took place.

Dan Kizer told police he saw an automobile leave the house immediately after the shooting, and that it contained a man, two youths and a child.

Mr. and Mrs. Fortson said Boggess had been placed under a peace bond after Mrs. Boggess was threatened at the Fortson home. The Fortsons were away from home when the shooting occurred.

A Bolt of Zeus Felt at Danville As Meteor Hits

Danville, Va., March 2 (Spl.). A meteorite crashing to the ground near here is believed to be the cause of the heavy explosion which rocked this vicinity last Sunday.

Fragments of fused mineral, heavy cinders and a 3-foot gash in a concrete road have been found at the Rockingham County Home near Wentworth, N. C.

The detonation there was deafening, residents said. A tree, apparently struck by a piece of the falling star, burst into flame.

The roar and the greenish flash was at first thought to be a weather freak, as a thunderstorm was in progress. However, the jar was severe enough to rattle windows and dislodge ornaments.

Byrd's Supply Vessel Rolls in Heavy Seas

The ship was rolling heavily in mountainous seas.

Shark Fins? Not Pu Yi! He'll Rule on a Diet of Ham And

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Hsinking (Changchun) Manchukuo, March 2.—Shark's fins, octopus tentacles and lily roots may be all right for the average Manchu, but give Emperor Kang Teh ham and eggs any day.

Big banquets and rare native foods irk the youthful ruler who mounted the throne of the new Manchurian Empire yesterday, amid traditional pomp and colorful ceremonies.

There is nothing he likes better than to sit down to a meal of such good old American delicacies as flapjacks, baked beans and apple pie.

Emperor Kang Teh is a great admirer of King George and plans to follow British court procedure, but in his eating and recreation, and in much of his daily living, he leans to things American.

The Emperor's day is a busy one, as he gets Manchukuo's construction program under way.

He arose at sunrise today to chant a prayer to Buddha.

And no kingly robes for him on an ordinary imperial day. He dressed this morning in his favorite American-style sack suit and a soft American shirt. A green fountain pen made by a well-known firm in the United States was stuck in the breast pocket of his coat.

After the Emperor took a walk around the palace grounds with several aids, he read English, Japanese and Chinese newspapers describing yesterday's enthronement ceremonies, and received a large number of distinguished visitors bringing him gifts.

NRA Facing Pay Balance, Says Johnson

Compliance, Safeguards to Labor Problems Also Cited.

Mrs. Pinchot Is Asked: "Who Is Governor of Pennsylvania?"

By Raymond Clapper.

Gen. Johnson himself turned critic of NRA in ringing down the curtain on the week's open forum for public complaint, and listed what he regarded as the five principal problems confronting the Recovery Administration.

Appearing unannounced at the final session in the Department of Commerce Auditorium, Gen. Johnson summed up his five problems as follows:

1. Insurance that price increases do not outrun wage increases.
2. Prevention of industrial or labor control against the public interest.
3. Compliance.
4. Insurance of statutory rights of labor.
5. Maximum contribution by NRA to the solution of the purchasing power and employment problems.

Labor problems have assumed mounting importance in the later stages of NRA criticism. It is closely involved with the problem of enforcement. Recovery officials are more concerned over these intertwined difficulties than about any other part of the recovery program.

Filene Sounds Warning.

Warning of potential trouble over labor conditions was sounded by Edward A. Filene, Massachusetts State NRA chairman, after a survey covering 14 important cities. He found severest criticism over lack of enforcement of labor provisions.

"This situation," he said, "is clearly full of danger for recovery plans."

While stating that he had not appeared to provide answers or alibis, and that he was "immensely pleased" with what had taken place, the recovery administrator could not resist the urge to retort to the bristling criticism of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, who had asserted earlier in the week that NRA enforcement in Pennsylvania had been a "ghastly farce."

To her assertion that labor meetings could not be held in some Pennsylvania towns, Gen. Johnson said he wished he had been present when she spoke so he could have asked her who the Governor of Pennsylvania was.

While the last of the public critics straggled through their remarks, recovery officials turned their major attention to the conferences with code authorities next week, where an effort to revamp many practices under NRA will be undertaken.

"S. R. O." for Roosevelt Speech.

Interest was being churned up in the opening address to be made by President Roosevelt Monday at 11 a. m., in Constitution Hall. He expects, it was said, to make this a major occasion when he will report to the country on his first year in office and point the future of his spectacular recovery program.

Every seat in the large hall has been reserved. Many Senators, Representatives, the entire Cabinet, scores of New Deal officials, and more than 2,000 members of code authorities will be assembled. The

Beer Dealer Guilty Of Sale to Middies

Annapolis, Md., March 2 (Spl.).—Convicted by a jury in Anne Arundel Circuit Court today of selling beer to Naval Academy midshipmen, Theodore Nichols, proprietor of a confectionery here, was given a ten-day jail sentence and fined $100 by Judge Nicholas H. Green.

Two third-class midshipmen, Charles K. Phillips and Raymond A. Walsh, were among the State witnesses. The defense claimed that no sale was made to midshipmen but to girls who accompanied them.

Nichols' conviction was under a 50-year-old law which prohibits sale of intoxicants in any form to midshipmen and college students. A few days after his arrest he abandoned his beer license. His establishment has been a favorite midshipmen rendezvous.

Roosevelt Tariff Message Starts Bitter G. O. P. Fight; Asks Philippine Freedom

Military Base Options Are Relinquished by President.

Island Officials Praise Message

Absence of Opposition Presages an Early Enactment.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

An Administration solution to the thorny problem of Philippine independence, greeted with unprecedented harmony on both sides of the Pacific, was launched for rapid passage through Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

In another of the quick, decisive messages that are bringing him close to the end of his legislative calendar, he asked that the Hawes-Cutting act be revived with certain modifications which have already made it acceptable to Philippine leaders.

Only immediate changes in the act he proposed are relinquishment of American military bases when final independence is achieved, and ultimate settlement of naval bases on mutually satisfactory terms.

Speedy Enactment Seen.

Absence of any considerable opposition, at home or abroad, lead to free predictions the modified bill will be speedily enacted by Congress and duly ratified by the Filipino people within the nine-month period provided. The old Hawes-Cutting law was allowed to lapse by the island Legislature last year.

In his message, the President took occasion to renounce this country's claim to any territory against its people's will. At the same time, he recognized that complete independence, without sufficient time for readjustments, would be an injustice little short of a denial of independence itself.

"Over a third of a century ago," the President recalled to Congress, "the United States, as a result of a war which had its origin in the Caribbean Sea, acquired sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, which lie many thousands of miles from our shores across the widest of oceans.

"Our Nation covets no territory; it desires to hold no people over whom it has gained sovereignty against their will."

Declaring that the United States has been committed to the principle of Philippine independence for many years, he recommended that provisions of the Hawes-Cutting act giving this Government the right to maintain military and naval bases in the islands, even after independence has been accomplished, be altered.

A Strategic Liability.

In this regard, by which this country surrenders its military options and agrees to compromise on naval stations, the President was believed paying small price for the support of Filipino leaders to the Communist Editor Loses Citizenship

Emil Gardos Has American Papers Taken Away.

Milwaukee, March 2 (AP).—In the heart of an alien taking the oath of American citizenship there is no room for any loyalty but to the Constitution of the United States, Federal Judge F. A. Geiger ruled today in revoking the citizenship of Emil Gardos, of Cleveland, Communist organizer, chemical engineer and editor.

Gardos, a Hungarian, naturalized in New York in 1928, and once a candidate for Congress from a Milwaukee district, under the decision "becomes an alien admittedly active in spreading communistic propaganda," Herman R. Landon, chief immigration inspector, said.

Gardos is subject to deportation, Landon said.

U. S. Backs British Plan for Cut in Arms

Note to London Viewed as Effort to Balk European Races.

By Kendall Foss.

Designed to encourage Great Britain in her efforts to attain at least some disarmament before it is too late, this Government repeated its stand and emphasized its hopes anew in a communication given the British government February 19 and made public yesterday.

Undersecretary of State Phillips told Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, that this Government:

Indorses most of the suggestions in the British memorandum of January 29.

Sticks to its general views that the best way to accomplish disarmament is to reduce offensive weapons while strengthening defensive power.

Appreciates the complexities of the European situation which forced Great Britain to modify its earlier proposals.

Is still unwilling to participate in strictly European problems, but is

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

London, March 2.—The opinion that Europe is face to face with the most serious disarmament crisis since Germany pulled up her stakes and left Geneva last October was expressed tonight in an authoritative British quarter.

The indication of the American State Department that the United States was in complete accord with the British government's views on disarmament gave only a glimmer of hope in the situation, for London has known for some time that Washington supported the British arms proposals.

No such encouragement, however, was evident on the European continent as a result of Capt. Anthony Eden's recent tour of the capitals.

The lord privy seal and arms experts returned home without tangible results and his critics labeled the trip a "talkie tour."

Contrary to reports published abroad that the United States had

Anti-Lobby Plan Pushed By President

Congress Leaders Confer With Roosevelt on Proposed Act.

Aggressively pursuing his declaration against political lawyers, President Roosevelt yesterday conferred at length with interested members of Congress in an attempt to unite support behind one bill for enactment at this session. The measure would have two applications:

1. Prohibit Congressmen, members of National party committees, and other public officials from practicing before Government agencies for monetary consideration.
2. Established regulations by department themselves restricting those who would be allowed to appear before them.

The general purpose, the President said, is the elimination of those who make a livelihood by such representation, often receiving large fees under the false pretense of exercising undue influence through Government or party positions.

Another meeting of Congressional leaders will be held on Capitol Hill within the next few days to write into one measure the best features of the several bills striking at "back-door" tactics which have been introduced.

Would Demonetize Politics.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, declared the whole question of barring Government and party officials from appearing before Federal agencies in behalf of other parties and for personal profit was gone into at the conference.

"We want to demonetize politics," interpolated Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan. "The President is very keenly concerned about the whole matter."

The White House conference crystallized yesterday after President Roosevelt's announced opposition to the legal practice of those whose offices might imply "backdoor" influence had led to the preparation of a number of bills, and to the resignation of Robert Jackson, of

War Contract Graft Probe Is Authorized

Bitter Fight Develops in House Debate on McSwain Plan.

By Frank Getty.

In a flurry of partisan charges and countercharges, touched off by Representative Fish (Republican), New York, who introduced again the subject of the Army Air Corps' competency to carry the air mail, the House late yesterday passed the McSwain resolution empowering its Military Affairs Committee to investigate "profiteering and irregularities" in procurement of military aircraft and other War Department material.

The fireworks which resulted from Fish's speech were entirely irrelevant to the issue before the House, which passed the resolution without a dissenting vote.

Stout defense of the Army fliers' ability to handle the Nation's air-mail business was voiced by Representatives Rogers, of New Hampshire; Hill, of Alabama, and Mead, of New York, Democrats, who deplored the partisanship of Fish's attack and denounced the phrase "legalized murder" so frequently applied to the transfer of the carrying of the mails to the Air Corps.

"This talk of legalized murder is a lot of bunk," exclaimed Hill, replying to Fish.

"The expression originated with commercial companies who are using it to camouflage the corruption which led to cancellation of their contracts."

Hill told of the testimony of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, before the Military Committee Thursday, reaffirming the Army's competency to cope with the situation in every phase of its requirements — pilots, planes and equipment.

Rogers, who will be chairman of the subcommittee entrusted with the investigation, after explaining that the very first flight he himself ever made ended in a crash, pleaded for abstinence from partisan politics in considering the resolution.

"It involves matters more dear than politics," exclaimed the New

Stavisky Widow Held as Check Stubs Bare Big Scandal Bribes

Paris, March 2 (AP).—The mysterious and beautiful widow of Serge Stavisky was arrested by secret service police today in connection with the Stavisky pawnshop scandal that cost investors $40,000,000 and led to bloody street riots.

The detention of Mme. Arlette Simon Stavisky followed the dramatic recovery of incriminating stubs for many millions of francs in her husband's checkbook, through a secret service agent who had been suspended on charges of neglect of duty in connection with the investigation.

Eighteen persons, including two members of the Chamber of Deputies, now face charges in the affair. New arrests were said to be imminent—with 12 already in custody—as Minister of Justice Cheron continued to uncover secrets of the scandal.

The identity of the "police tipster" from whom the check stubs were obtained was kept secret, officials frankly admitting that they fear reprisals. The stubs were expected to furnish vital clews to those on the Stavisky pay roll.

Police merely said they got the check receipts from a "personality" they would not name. On them were names of many recipients of "bearer" checks from the "Master Swindler."

Mme. Stavisky, police said, gave the stubs to a friend on the day "Handsome Alex" Stavisky was found dead in a lonely hideaway in Chamonix.

The friend, in turn, gave them to the mysterious "personality."

Chief Bony of the secret service gave them early today to former Premier Albert Sarraut. It was Bony who was recently suspended for alleged laxity in bringing to jutice those connected with the swindle.

Battle to Continue Balance of Session

President Asks Power to Change Rates 50 Per Cent.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt's request yesterday for authority to modify tariff rates within a 50 per cent range as part of reciprocal trade agreements will arouse the bitterest fight of this session of Congress, it was indicated immediately.

No sooner had the President's message been read in the House and a bill carrying out its proposals been introduced than it was evident that the Republicans intend to seize on this issue as one which might be used to reconstruct their party.

The fight will center in the Senate. Although the House Republicans appear as bitterly opposed as their colleagues at the other end of the Capitol, they will be powerless, due to the large Democratic majority and the use of rules restricting debate.

Filibuster Not Remote.

Senate Republicans will be able to discuss the bill at length and to offer amendments, some of which may be adopted and prove embarassing to the President. The possibilities of a filibuster by Senate Republicans are not remote. At all events, this bill is expected to keep Congress in session at least until May.

It is too early to say what the outcome of the fight may be. The Republicans, even if united, can not defeat it alone. At least 15 Senate Democrats will have to oppose the measure to defeat it. In view of the President's popularity it now appears doubtful that so many will desert their party on its traditional position.

Lobby Will Start Soon.

Yet once the protective-tariff lobby starts to work on Capitol Hill, none may predict the outcome. There is no doubt that the lobby will go to work at once with virtually all industries lacking an export trade supporting it. No manufacturer can be sure he will not be hurt by delegation of blanket powers to the President, it was pointed out.

The fight is expected to take on the aspect of a sectional battle, with the Senators from the cotton-growing South and the wheat-producing West supporting the measure. On the other hand, it has been indicated that the New England, Middle Atlantic and Middle Western

State Hospitals Held Fire Traps

Only 1 Virginia Institution Safe, Committeemen Warn Assembly.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, March 2.—Fire hazards exist in all Virginia State hospitals except one, a legislative committee reported today.

The committee recommended immediate installation of sprinkler systems to prevent possible disasters, at a cost of approximately $175,000.

Unsafe conditions were found at Staunton, Williamsburg, Marion and Amherst County institutions. The report said most of the several thousand patients involved would be unable to save themselves in case of fire.

"Although each has some modern fireproof buildings," the report added, "many of the buildings are not fireproof and might easily be destroyed with serious loss of life. The fire hazard is critical in each of the hospitals except Central State Hospital at Petersburg and in the colony for the epileptic and feeble-minded.

"The committee feels that it can not too strongly urge the necessity for immediate correction of this condition."

British M.P. Tells of Plot To Save Czar

Again Describes Killing of Rasputin in Suit of Princess.

London, March 2 (AP).—A British member of Parliament calmly disclosed in a musty London courtroom today that he had tried to save the Russian royal family from death at the hands of blood-mad revolutionaries and that he had been invited to join a plot to kill the mad monk, Rasputin.

Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, the witness, brought to a startling finish the four days of testimony in the $2,000,000 libel suit instituted by Princess Irena Youssoupoff against the Metro-Goldyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd., producers of "Rasputin and the Empress" in which the plaintiff claims she was defamed.

If thrill-seeking society members and others believed their shudders were over with the finish of accounts of how the sinister monk was poisoned, beaten, and shot in the cellar of the St. Petersburg Imperial Palace, they were mistaken, for Locker-Lampson's story sent electric waves through the packed courtroom.

Tried to Save Czar.

The commander, a member of Parliament for 25 years and the holder of a distinguished war record, declared he was partly responsible for recruiting an armored car force which went to Russia during the World War.

"I got back to Petrograd when the revolution broke out," he testified. "I was besieged in my hotel there. I met the Czar and served as a fighter under Grand Duke Nicholas."

"Was it arranged," interrupted Defense Counsel Sir William Jowitt, "that you should evacuate the royal family?"

"We had a plot on foot to save the Czar," replied Locker-Lampson.

"Unfortunately it could not be accomplished," commented Sir William.

Asked to Kill Rasputin.

"I was actually acquainted not only with Rasputin himself, but with Vladimer M. Purishkevitch (one of those who helped kill the monk) and others," Locker-Lampson continued.

"I was actually invited by Purishkevitch to murder Rasputin."

The commander then told the details of the slaying of Gregory Rasputin, the so-called "power behind the Russian throne"—how his enemies gave him poisoned food, then shot him, beat him with heavy cudgels, and finally hurled the bleeding body into the icy river.

He testified—as Sir William said—"to do what you can to assist the ends of justice."

Ickes Approves Mullen.

Among lawyers practicing here who have not resigned is Arthur F. Mullen, National committeeman of Nebraska. Regarding his activities, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who has waged war on lobbying, yesterday said he saw little ground for criticism of Mr. Mullen in his representation of proponents of the Loup River and Sutherland power projects in Nebraska.

The Cabinet officer was quoted by the United Press to the effect that Mr. Mullen had told him in what manner he was acting as a lawyer, adding, "generally speaking, there can't be any complaint against a man who is willing to discuss fees." He also observed that employment of lawyers to represent clients before the Public Works Administration is not necessary, but that this is not his concern.

Senator Vandenberg said Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., attended the White House conference in that one of the principal purposes of his bill would be "to stop Treasury agents in the field also acting as party fund collectors, which is a vice I am particularly concerned with."

Others attending the meeting were Senators George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, and James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, and Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Bellair, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., today won the West Coast Open Golf Championship with four par-cracking rounds of 140-68-68—276.

Runyan was eight strokes ahead of Al Watrous, Detroit, who averaged par for a total of 139-72-73—284.

Braced at 287 each were Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and John Revolta, Milwaukee, while Johnnie Hines, Timber Point, Long Island, finished a stroke down the list at 288.

Text of Tariff Amendment

Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, Introduces Measure to Give Roosevelt Power Over Reciprocal Trade Agreements.

Here is the text of President Roosevelt's tariff message to Congress:

To the Congress:

I am requesting the Congress to authorize the Executive to enter into Executive commercial agreements with foreign nations; and in pursuance thereof within carefully guarded limits to modify existing duties and import restrictions in such a way as will benefit American agriculture and industry.

This action seems opportune and necessary at this time for several reasons.

First, world trade has declined with startling rapidity. Measured in terms of the volume of goods in 1933, it has been reduced to approximately 70 per cent of its 1929 volume; measured in terms of dollars, it has fallen to 35 per cent. The drop in the foreign trade of the United States has been even sharper. Our exports in 1933 were but 52 per cent of the 1929 volume, and 32 per cent of the 1929 value.

This has meant idle hands, still machines, ships tied to their docks, despairing farm households, and hungry industrial families. It has made infinitely more difficult the planning for economic readjustment in which the Government is now engaged.

Restoration Difficult.

You and I know that the world does not stand still; that trade movements and relations, once interrupted, can with the utmost difficulty be restored; that even in tranquil and prosperous times there is a constant shifting of trade channels.

How much greater, how much more violent is the shifting in these times of change and of stress is clear from the record of current history. Every nation must at all times be in a position quickly to adjust its taxes and tariffs to meet sudden changes and avoid severe fluctuations in both its export and its imports.

You and I know, too, that it is important that the country maintain a rounded National life, that it must sustain activities vital to National defense, and that such interests can not be sacrificed for passing advantage. Equally clear is the fact that a full and permanent domestic recovery depends in part upon a revived and strengthened international trade and that American exports can not be permanently increased withou a corresponding increase in imports.

Others Taking Field.

Second, other governments are to an ever-increasing extent winning their share of international trade by negotiated reciprocal trade agreements. If American agricultural and industrial interests are to retain their deserved place in this trade, the American Government must be in a position to bargain for that place with other governments by rapid and decisive negotiation based upon a carefully considered program, and to grant with discernment corresponding opportunities in the American market for foreign products supplementary to our own.

If the American Government is not in a position to make fair offers for fair opportunities, its trade will be superseded. If it is not in a position at a given moment rapidly to alter the terms on which it is willing to deal with other countries, it can not adequately protect its trade against discriminations and against bargains injurious to its interests. Furthermore, a promise to which prompt effect can not be given is not an inducement which can pass currently at par in commercial negotiations.

For this reason, any smaller degree of authority in the hands of the Executive would be ineffective. The executive branches of virtually all other important trading countries already possess some such power.

Work Must Be Slow.

I would emphasize that quick results are not to be expected. The successful building up of trade without injury to American producers depends upon a cautious and gradual evolution of plans.

The disposition of other countries to grant an improved place to American products should be carefully sounded and considered; upon the attitude of each must somewhat depend our future course of action. With countries which are unwilling to abandon purely restrictive national programs, or to make concessions toward the reestablishment of international trade, no headway will be possible.

The exercise of the authority which I propose must be carefully weighed in the light of the latest information so as to give assurance that no sound and important American interest will be injuriously disturbed. The adjustment of our foreign trade relations must rest on the premise of undertaking to benefit and not to injure such interests. In a time of difficulty and unemployment such as this, the highest consideration of the position of the different branches of American production is required.

From the policy of reciprocal negotiation which is in prospect, I hope in time that definite gains will result to American agriculture and industry.

Markets Will Expand.

Important branches of our agriculture, such as cotton, tobacco, hog products, rice, cereal and fruit-raising, and those branches of American industry whose mass production methods have led the world, will find expanded opportunities and productive capacity in foreign markets, and will thereby be spared in part, at least, the heart-breaking readjustments that must be necessary if the shrinkage of American foreign commerce remains permanent.

A resumption of interantional trade can not but improve the general situatiodn of other countries, and thus increase their purchasing power. Let us well remember that this in turn spells increased opportunity for American sales.

Legislation such as this is an essential step in the program of National economic recovery which the Congress has elaborated during the past year. It is part of an emergency program necessitated by the economic crisis through which we are passing. It should provide that the trade agreements shall be terminable within a period not to exceed three years; a shorter period probably would not suffice for putting the program into effect.

In its execution, the Executive must, of course, pay due heed to the requirements of other branches of our recovery program, such as the National industrial recovery act.

I hope for early action. The many immediate situations in the field of international trade that today await our attention can thus be met effectively and with the least possible delay.

Court Is Asked For Grayson Case Dismissal

Conspiracy IndictmentsToo Vague; Lawyers Argue; Judge Asks Briefs.

A move for dismissal of indictments against John Cook Grayson, brother of Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, which grew out of his alleged tips on bank examinations to Robert Stunz, Park Savings Bank executive who killed himself, was begun in iDstrict Supreme Court yesterday.

Attorneys for Grayson declared the indictments, which allege conspiracy to defraud the Government and conspiracy to commit larceny, were vague, indefinite and uncertain.

Justice Peyton Gordon told the Grayson attorneys and Assistant United States Attorney John Fihelly to submit briefs. Fihelly had contended that conspiracy indictments seldom go into minute details, and cited numerous authorities to support his position.

Citing each section of the indictments, Grayson's attorneys claimed they were so indefinite that their client was unable to prepare a defense against them.

Grayson was formerly chief clerk in the chief National bank examiner's office in the Treasury Department. He is said to have telephoned Stunz when bank examiners would visit the aPrk Savings institution, in order to give Stunz a chancet to cover up a shortage of $1,500,000.

Stunz committed suicide shortly after the bank holiday was declared last March. It then developed that the bank shortage was more than $2,000,000.

U. S. Backs British Plan for Arms Cut vitally interested in the maintenance of peace and hence,

Applauds the British effort to reach a general agreement on disarmament.

Hope for Paris Effect.

The communication is brief and contains nothing startling new. Its significance lies rather in its implied awareness that the cause of disarmament is badly in need of every available scrap of support.

Sir Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, has just concluded a tour of the principal capitals of Europe seeking to enlist the powers in favor of the British proposal. Germany and Italy appear more or less favorably disposed; France, as has happened before, is hesitant.

Repetition of the American stand (which closely parallels the British suggestions) and sympathetic awareness of British difficulties coupled with renewed hopes results will be obtained can not fail to have a moral effect upon the Quai d'Orsay. The effect is once again to threaten France with isolation. Isolation in this case means the blame for a European failure to avert an arms race.

Italian Plan Remains.

If the British proposals, published early in February, fail of acceptance there remains only the Italian scheme for stabilization at the present levels by the armed powers and permission to Germany to build up to those admittedly high planes.

The Italian plan is the last barrier between an orderly world and the chaos of an unbridled arms race. Realizing this, and knowing at the same time that this country would not be able to indorse the Italian plan of no disarmament but only no increase in armaments, the State Department apparently felt now was the time to give one more discreet push in the right direction.

Having informed the British government confidentially nearly a fortnight ago of its support, the department waited until Eden's trip was over before allowing its approval to become known. Thus it avoids the possibility of being charged with mingling in European affairs and seeking to influence continental capitals in their decisions.

Intimidation Alleged, Plebiscite Delayed

New York, March 2 (AP).—A plebiscite ordered by the regional labor board for 1,450 employes of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co., to determine whether they wish to become members of a company union or an American Federation of Labor organization, was declared invalid today by Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, acting head of the board.

Mrs. Herrick charged intimidation by the employers, declaring she had affidavits showing bus drivers, conductors and mechanics had been warned not to vote.

Tariff Message Brings Instant G. O. P. Attack

Battle Over President's Plan to Continue All Session.

delegations, and those from other manufacturing sections will fight it.

The President's paramount argument advanced for authority to enter into foreign-trade agreements and increase or decrease American tariffs by 50 per cent was the necessity to restore international trade.

Cites "Idle Hands."

Stagnation of foreign trade, he argued, has meant "idle hands, still machines, ships tied to their docks, despairing farm households and hungry industrial families." Unless regained now, American foreign trade may be irretrievably lost, he contended.

But exports can not be increased, he pointed out, "without a corresponding increase in imports." Other governments, he continued, through reciprocal trade agreements, were loosening trade barriers and recapturing international business. If this country is to maintain and expand its trade, it must be in a position to bargain, he asserted.

The latter part of Mr. Roosevelt's message was devoted to a promise that the authority requested would be used with caution, and only after careful scrutiny of all proposals. He proposed to exercise the authority so that "no sound and important American interest will be injuriously disturbed."

Permanency Disputed.

Mr. Roosevelt concluded by terming the proposed legislation "part of an emergency program necessitated by the economic crisis." Later it was revealed that the White House regards this legislation as emergency in character and believes that all discussions of permanency are academic.

Such a discussion broke out on Capitol Hill as soon as Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, introduced a bill carrying out the Roosevelt program. This bill placed no time restriction on the proposed Presidential power.

It provided, however, that foreign trade agreements concluded under the legislation "shall be subject to termination, upon due notice to the foreign government concerned, at the end of not more than three years from the date on which the agreement comes into force and if not then terminated shall be subject to termination thereafter upon not more than six months' notice."

Lasting Effect Conceded.

It was soon conceded by Democrats in both houses that agreements could remain in effect indefinitely under this section. Chairman Pat Harrison, Democratic chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, conceded the legislation permitted permanent agreements.

The Doughton bill would repeal the flexible clause powers of the Tariff Commission. For the purpose of expanding foreign markets, controlling the flow of foreign trade and rehabilitating American industry, the President, instead, would be authorized to:

1—Enter into trade agreements with foreign governments or instrumentalities thereof.

2—Proclaim such modifications of existing duties as are required or are appropriate to carry out such foreign trade agreements, provided, that no duty shall be increased or decreased more than 50 per cent of the rate in the Hawley-Smoot act and that no article will be transferred between free and dutiable lists.

Called Part of Pledge.

Senator Harrison contended that this plan was "a very vital part" of the recovery program and was "in keeping with the party's platform pledge and the candidates' campaign promises"—the latter a pointed reminder to Democratic members of Congress of their campaign pledges.

Senator Harrison argued that the President, with the welfare and interest of the Nation at heart, will use these powers for "the advancement, rather than injury, of American interests." He claimed that if the President were required to await Congressional ratification of each trade agreement "the whole plan would be destroyed."

The finance chairman said he saw no reason for "unnecessary and prolonged discussion." He said consideration of the bill should go forward in an orderly manner, with reasonable opportunity for fair and full discussion.

McNary Sees Reluctancy.

Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary predicted that Congress would be reluctant to give the President the powers he asked. He said he regarded the proposed legislation not as an emergency measure, but as permanent policy.

"For more than 100 years Congress has exercised plenary power in the fixation of tariff duties, relinquishing some of its power in the 1930 act in the flexible provision," he asserted. "The safety of that provision was that no change could be made without due notice to parties interested and public hearings. In the bill proposed these safeguards are removed and the President is granted exclusive authority to modify existing duties as a permanent executive policy of the country.

"This power, however righteous a President may be, could unwittingly be used to the advantage of one section to the supreme injury of another section. Power of this kind should not be lodged in any one man's hands and I shall oppose the proposition."

House Republican Leader Bertram Snell was caustic in his statement. He termed the President's request as "the most outrageous demand for authority ever voiced by any Executive in the history of the country." He said the President was seeking to make the tariff question "a purely personal matter."

"People who think the tariff should not be made a political football," he continued, "take the position that tariffs should carefully and scientifically be determined on a basis of comparative costs of production." He recalled the Democrats fought the flexible provisions of the present law.

Mr. Snell maintained that "such extensive powers in the hands of an unscrupulous Executive could be used to destroy any industry or any part of the country."

On the other hand, Speaker Henry T. Rainey pointed out that Congress has "repeatedly demonstrated it is not capable of writing tariff legislation from the floor and I hope this marks the end of the practice." He said the tariff question should be removed from politics.

Others reiterated these arguments. Later, it is expected that the constitutionality of the President's proposal will be argued, as well as the validity of a proposal to let the President negotiate pacts with foreign governments without Senate ratification.

Allan Hoover Starts In Farming Business

Fresno, Calif., March 2 (AP).—Leaving a "white collar" job, Allan Hoover, second son of former President Herbert Hoover, turned today to the business of "dirt" farming.

As manager of the San Josquin Valley ranch holdings of himself and his associates, young Hoover will supervise the 2,500-acre Greenfield Ranch and a 500-acre farm he and associates acquired recently. Both ranches are said to be ideally suited to the growing of practically all California field and orchard crops.

Roosevelt Tariff Message Text

Recovery of Lost Trade Difficult, President Warns in Urging Executive Powers for Reciprocal Agreements With Foreign Countries.

Following is the text of the Administration's tariff amendment bill, introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee:

"A bill to amend the tariff act of 1930.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the tariff act of 1930 is amended by adding at the end of title III the following:

"Part III—Promotion of foreign trade.

"Section 350 (A), for the purpose of expanding foreign markets for the products of the United States (as a means of assisting in overcoming domestic unemployment and the present economic depression, in increasing the purchasing power of the American public in the present emergency, and in establishing and maintaining a better relationship among various branches of American agriculture, industry, mining and commerce) by regulating the admission of foreign goods into the United States in accordance with the characteristics and needs of various branches of American production so that foreign markets will be made available to those branches of American production which require and are capable of developing such outlets by affording corersponding market opportunities for foreign products in the United States—the President, whenever he finds that any existing duties or other import restrictions are unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States or that the purpose above declared will be promoted by the use of the powers herein conferred, he is authorized from time to time—

"(1) To enter into foreign trade agreements with foreign governments or instrumentalities thereof; and

"(2) To proclaim such modifications of existing duties and other import restrictions, or such additional import restrictions, as are required or appropriate to carry out any foreign trade agreement that the President has entered into hereunder. No proclamation shall be made increasing or decreasing by more than 50 per centum any existing rate of duty or transferring any articles between the dutiable and free lists.

"The proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall apply to articles the growth, produce or manufacturer of all foreign countries, whether imported directly or indirectly, provided that the President may suspend the application to articles the growth, produce or manufacturer of any country because of its discriminatory treatment of American commerce or for other reasons; and the proclaimed duties and other import restrictions shall be in effect from and after such time as is specified in the proclamation. The President may at any time terminate any such proclamation in whole or in part.

"(b) As used in this section, the term duties 'and other import restrictions' includes (1) rate, form, and classification of import duties, and (2) import limitations, prohibitions, charges and the exactions other than duties.

"Sec. 2. (a) Subparagraph (d) of paragraph 369, the last sentence of paragraph 1402, the provisos to paragraphs 371, 401, 1650, 1678 and 1603 (1) and section 336 of the tariff act of 1930 are repealed. The third paragraph of section 311 of the tariff act of 1930 shall not apply to any agreement concluded pursuant to this act.

"(b) Every foreign trade agreement concluded pursuant to this act shall be subject to termination, upon due notice to the foreign government concerned, at the end of not more than three years from the date on which the agreement comes into force, and if not then terminated, shall be subject to termination thereunder upon not more than six months' notice."

French Stand Dims Britain's Arms Cut Hope

taken a new initiative in disarmament negotiations, American Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis said that "the United States is not offering any new plan as far as I know."

Mr. Davis, who is in London en route to Stockholm, interpreted the American policy as one of waiting for European governments to settle their political differences and resume arms discussions.

"When disarmament is ready and if I am needed and wanted, I shall be there," he said.

Capt. Eden conferred today with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, preparatory to a meeting next week of the cabinet sub-committee on disarmament.

To Continue Fight.

The official view in government circles remained one of dogged determination to continue the fight for a suitable arms convention.

Although a report that France is demanding Great Britain's support, in guaranteeing that Germany will not rearm past a "moderate" limit, has reached Downing street, officials declined to presuppose what Britain's reaction will be.

It was pointed out, however, that Great Britain, in a recent memorandum, expressed a willingness to accede to a periodic and automatic supervision of armaments.

Hit by French.

The British proposal that France must disarm has brought strong criticism of the MacDonald government's scheme from Paris quarters.

In Italy the official view was said to be held that a limitation on further increases in arms is the only feasible process.

While the British plan was accepted as a basis for negotiations by Germany, its prospects are viewed skeptically in that country, according to British information from Berlin.

The British scheme recognized Germany's demands, proposed consultation among the powers if a signatory nation violates the projected treaty by manufacturing forbidden armaments, and suggested a compromise of between 200,000 and 300,000 as the size of the German army.

Sewage Ruling Hits 100 Cities

May Have to Pay Briton Royalties on System Used 20 Years.

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Scores of American cities, using a sewage treatment process developed 20 years ago by a British inventor, may have to begin paying royalties on the process, under a ruling by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today.

The trijudge court unanimously up held the patent rights of Activated Sludge, Inc., an American company partly owned by Acticated Sludge, Ltd., of England.

By the decree, sustaining that of District Judge Ferdinand Geiger, of Milwaukee, a master in chancery will be assigned to fix the value of the patent infringements for which the City of Milwaukee must pay.

Carl W. Johnson, of Chicago, former Detroit resident, is president of the American corporation. He said today that probably 100 American cities used the process, and, unless Milwaukee appealed successfully to the U. S. Supreme Court, all eventually would be forced to pay royalties.

Strewl, Labeled Kidnaper, Calls O'Connell 'Liar'

Court in Uproar After Political Family Scion Describes Abduction.

Albany, N. Y., March 2 (AP).—Lieut. John J. O'Connell, young scion of a politically powerful family, leveled an accusing finger at Manney Strewl today and told a jury "that man right there" was one of his kidnapers.

"You're a liar!" shouted the nattily dressed former convict, as he leaped to his feet. "I saved your life and you know it."

It was the end of the fifth day of Strewl's trial. The young National Guardsman told of his 22-day abduction last July—the first full story of his sensational kidnaping.

He told of being handcuffed to a bed while his uncles, Ed and Dan O'Connell, moved every police agency and finally paid $40,000 for his release. Strewl was the intermediary who paid that ransom.

Judge Earl H. Gallup sat up in astonishment at Strewl's outburst. He banged the gavel. Strewl's attorney, Daniel J. Prior—the man who twice saved the murdered gangster Jack "Legs" Diamond from New York law—tried to calm his client.

The former convict heard himself accused by Prosecutor John T. Delaney of writing the ransom notes.

Prior told the jury:

The first witness today was Sam B. Gross, a salesman, who testified that during a visit to New York he heard Strewl tell another man:

"We'll get young O'Connell."

Gross said the other man was Phil Ziegler, whom he described as "one of the big mobs."

Perfect Prefecture of New Deal

Hard-Boiled Discipline Is Not Apparent at White House.

By the Unofficial Observer.

SOMEBODY in the Department of Agriculture suggested that output of export crops could be reduced by paying the farmers to plant less acreage. This was the germ of the domestic allotment plan which Prof. Milburn Lincoln Wilson took over and developed. He disclaims its sole authorship, as farm economists exchange ideas freely and the plan grew and was improved in the course of these exchanges. But "M. L." was its chief author.

When the plan first received publicity early in 1932 it was denounced as "hare-brained." Then Eastern economists took it up and the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund made a grant to finance research into a plan for dealing with the American farm problem. So the domestic allotment plan came into being. Rexford G. Tugwell, who had just joined the Roosevelt Brain Trust, heard of it, went to Chicago and got hold of M. L. Wilson and the plan for Roosevelt. F. D. R. adopted it and Tugwell and Wilson refined it for the Roosevelt campaign.

It was the backbone o fthe agricultural adjustment act, the basis of the vast programs to control the production of cotton, wheat and Henry Wallace's beloved corn-hogs.

Wilson's specialty was wheat, but after the wheat plan was set up in the summer of 1933, Roosevelt asked him to take over the subsistence homestead experiment. They had discussed it several times and for years had both been advocating the creation of the rural industrial community—a community in which the ordinary family got most of its living off the land, and a small cash crop in the form of part-time employment at a nearby factory or handicraft shop. It amounted in effect to the secession of all but commercial agriculture from the monetary system, and the creation of an entirely new type of society, based on the scientific use of land and the decentralization of industry.

Takes Over Development Of Rural Communities.

So Wilson took over the job of using $25,000,000 to experiment in the development of model rural-industrial communities. More than a dozen have already been begun. They are of widely different types, suited to various problem-areas in different geographical regions of the country. Some are being established to take care of stranded coal miners and lumberjacks, whose traditional industries have dwindled or disappeared with the exhaustion of resources or the appearance of competition. Others are being established for stranded Southern farmers.

In Wisconsin, families are being transplanted from submarginal lands in the forest and they will earn their cash crop by part-time work in lumbering. Despite the demand for billions of dollars and thousands of such subsistence homestead communities, all that can be done with $25,000,000 is to set up various experimental units to serve as a basis for future operations.

M. L. Wilson has done a remarkable job. Faced with the opposition of organized agriculture, which thinks that it is the duty of everybody not now on a farm to pay high prices for foodstuffs; of organized labor, which suspects a plot either to cut industrial wages or to weaken the influence of the unions; of urban industrialists, who fear that it means the end of the glut in the city labor market, he has kept his temper and his head.

Shaggy in appearance, with a jag-toothed smile and as bulky as a boulder, M. L.'s genial drawl carries him along easily through a maze of conflicting interests, ideas and rackets. He is a shy man and shuns publicity, but behind the scenes he is one of the great social inventors of the country. If his experiment succeeds, he will have solved the basic social and economic problem which has tortured our society since the beginning of the industrial revolution and which has created the divisions in our community, on the basis of which the financiers have established their rule of "safety first and 6 per cent."

Roosevelt Turns "Prison" Into Observation Post.

If every politician is the prisoner of his private secretary, Roosevelt has turned his prison into the best observation post in the history of American politics. For this reason, the "White House Gang," the "Cuff-Links Club," the small group of men and women through whom the President functions, is in many ways the essence of the whole New Deal.

Most Presidential secretaries try to become "air conditioners" for the Chief Executive, to fend off one man and pass on another, to dismiss inconvenient ideas and welcome only those opinions which suit the convenience of the Administration, to be deaf to the hisses and to use amplifiers on the cheers.

This crowd is different. They are the Praetorian Guard of the Roosevelt Administration, the prefects of the palace, and they are loyal to the President in an ardent natural manner which can be only described as love. They love him, each in his own way, and from each he can count on receiving wholehearted, affectionate team-play of a sort that is rare in any walk of life, except for politics, the basis of which is personal loyalty, say the slogan-makers what they will.

These are the eyes and ears, the hands and feet, of the man who administers the greatest powers in American history. Their qualities and defects, their characters and temperments, are part and parcel of the New Deal. They are all old friends; their intimate association with Roosevelt goes back for 20 and 30 years; they were all helping him in his Vice Presidential campaign in 1920; they have maintained touch with him and each other since that time and each has found his role in helping F. D. R. run the country.

A wife, a political strategist, a good publicity man, a good, friendly "average" man, and a confidential stenographer—such is the team of Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, Louis McHenry Howe, Stephen T. Early, Marvin H. McIntyre and Marguerite Le Hand.

White House Doors Are Open to Ideas.

It is they who have kept the doors of the White House wide open to all ideas, however revolutionary, and to all people, however humble. They have widened the President's range of information and sympathies. They are the adjutants, orderlies, and chiefs of staff for his audacious adventure in progressive democracy. They are loyal and reliable, both to him as a man and to his policies.

Howe, the secretary, and McIntyre and Early, the assistant secretaries, are all former newspapermen. McIntyre and Early have also had years of experience with the newsreels. No President has ever been so well staffed to handle the mechanics of publicity.

All three were with Roosevelt in the 1920 campaign. They have kept up their freindship ever since and McIntyre and Early were probably the only two men in the world suitable for duty at the White House of whose devotion Howe could be assured. Others would have been as faithful to the President, but not to Howe. Each of the three looks after his own work, but Howe occasionally steps in. Where former President Hoover had three bickering secretaries of equal rank, Howe is the only full secretary in the White House today. It was his own idea, although it was made to appear that the others had suggested it out of respect for Howe. Yet there is no hard-boiled discipline involved in this subordination: they are old friends and have kept faithfully their annual reunions on Roosevelt's birthday.

They make an efficient team and they have a lot of fun at their jobs. One of their minor sports is shunting professional callers and trouble-makers around the triangle. The whole atmosphere of the group is one of good humor and gayety. They all know that Roosevelt likes to talk and that he has no sense of the passage of time. One of their periodic tasks, of which they make a game, is breaking up Cabinet meetings after the business has been finished and "the Boss" is engaged in telling stories. They usually take turns going in and trying to get him out, but recently, three of them—Early, McIntyre and "Missy" Le Hand—entered the Cabinet room simultaneously, bowed solemnly and announced in unison that the President had to come out and attend his press conference.

For the White House is distinctly a coeducational institution and the four men—Roosevelt and his three official assistants—work against the all-embracing background of Marguerite Le Hand, last to join the charmed circle, and Mrs. Roosevelt, who was the first "Roosevelt fan" and who is to a great extent the secret of his political vitality.

Rail Employes Urge Black Bill

Strain of Their Work and Little Cost of Short Day Testified.

Representatives of rail employes added their indorsement yesterday to the Black bill, which would give railroad workers a six-hour day, the Associated Press reported.

J. G. Luhrsen, of the American Train Dispatchers Association, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that dispatchers work under a great stratin and have a life span 15 years less than the average.

J. A. Phillips, vice president of the Order of Railway Conductor, said the increased cost of the six-hour day would be small.

L. E. Keller, speaking for maintenance-of-way employes, said maintenance work had fallen behind $1,000,000,000 due to the depression and labor-saving devices.

1 Shot as Cuban Labor Fights Mendieta Rule

Havana, March 2 (AP).—Shooting again reverberated throughout Havana tonight.

As strikers staged demonstrations, Juan Antiga, secretary of labor and the sole Leftist cabinet member, resigned because he disagreed with President Carlos Mendieta's alleged repressive attitude toward labor.

Many shots were fired, and one demonstrator, Rafael Placencia, a Spaniard, was wounded.

Chicago Bans Riots in Films

Mob Scenes Must Be Cut Fro mNewsreels and Other Pictures.

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—All newsreel pictures of rioting or mob scenes were banned today from the smreens of Chicago motion picture theaters by order of Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

The mayor said he issued the order because such pictures "might incite Chicago Communists to riot."

There have been no major riots in Chicago for years and but few instances of mob disorder.

Local officials of Paramount News and other film services said the order forced the mto edit their films.

"Some of the scenes cut out were those of the rioting in Vienna," said one newsreel official. "They were among the best pictures of the year, and were obtained at considerable cost and with risk to human life."

The Chicago oBard of Censors, operating under the crime prevention division of the police department, also anhounced permits would be refused for any film containing mob or riot scenes. Films can not be shown without a permit from the censor board.

Police said the order would be enforced strictly.

Roosevelt Acts For Filipino Independence

plan, since the Philippines have been regarded more as a strategic liability than as a military asset.

Among principal apprehensions to the Hawes-Cutting act were the prospect of economic disintegration of the Philippines, cut loose from a free American market, and the possibility of their ultimate domination by Japan. By relinquishing all militaristic claims in the Far Pacific, the President was provided with a good talking point for the London Naval Conference in 1935.

"To change, at this time, the economic provisions of the previous law would reflect discredit on ourselves," the President continued in his message, which left to future mediation the correction of such "imperfections and inequalities" as exist in the Hawes-Cutting law.

"I am confident," he added, "that if this legislation is passed by the Congress and accepted by the Philippines, we shall increase the mutual regard between the two peoples during the transition period. After the attainment of actual independence by them, friendship and trust will live."

Chairman John McDuffie, of the House Insular Affairs Committee, immediately introduced the bill to carry out the President's recommendations, commenting, "our hope is that we may get entirely out of the islands." The Senate was not in session, but Senator Millard E. Tydings, chairman of the Senate Territories Committee, who had large part in the compromise plan, was ready to introduce it in that body.

The new bill is identical to the Hawes-Cutting act, which provides for independence within a 12-to-14-year period, with certain amendments. It extends the time for acceptance of the law by the Philippines, which expired January 17, to October 1, this year.

Paves Way for Bases.

Besides eliminating military bases, the bill empowers the President to enter into negotiations with the Philippine Republic "not later than two years after his proclamation recognizing the independence of the Philippines for the adjustment and settlement of all questions relating to naval reservations and coaling stations. * * * ."

The compromise plan gives the Philippines hope for further economic concessions through future modifications by Congres, in accordance with the President's suggestion for corrections. It is an outgrowth of conferences Manuel L. Quezon, a political power in the Philippines, had with Mr. Roosevelt and Administration and Congressional leaders.

In New York last night, the Filipino Senator assured the Associated Press of his complete satisfaction with the President's message, while Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner of the Philippines, took the floor in the House to express his "heartfelt approval." It was the opposition of the Quezon faction that killed the Hawes-Cutting proposal last year.

Lauds President's Action.

Paying tribute to Representative McDuffie and Senator Tydings and predicting that the new bill will be approved by those who opposed the Hawes-Cutting law, the commissioner added: "There can not be found in the history of the world an action like that taken by the President of the United States in his desire to solve the Philippine situation."

In June the Filipinos elect a new Legislature, and if the bill is enacted may name delegates to a constitutional convention at the same time. The latter may meet at any time prior to October 1 to draw up a constitution for the islands.

The Philippine message is believed one of the last important communications President Roosevelt will send to this Congress. All that remains of major consequence, he smilingly commented at his press conference, is a message on the war debts, which he is not yet ready to write.

Air Victim's Funeral Held.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 2 (AP). Funeral services were held here today for Miss Mary Carter, stewardess on the passenger plane which crashed in a snowstorm near Salt Lake City a week ago.

Text of Philippine Message

Over a third of a century ago, the United States as a result of a war which had its origin in the Caribbean Sea, acquired sovereignty over the Philippine Islands, which lie many thousands of miles from our shores across the widest of oceans. Our Nation covets no territory; it desires to hold no people over whom it has gained sovereignty through war against their will.

In keeping with the principles of justice and in keeping with our traditions and aims, our Government for many years has been committed by law to ultimate independence for the people of the Philippine Islands whenever they should establish a suitable government capable of maintaining that independence among the Nations of the world. We have believed that the time for such independence is at hand.

A law passed by the Seventy-second Congress over a year ago was the initial step, providing the methods, conditions and circumstances under which our promise was to be fulfilled. That act provided that the United States would retain the option of keeping certain military and naval bases in the islands after actual independence had been accomplished.

As to the military bases, I recommend that this provision be eliminated from the law and that these be relinquished simultaneously with the accomplishment of final Philippine independence.

As to the naval bases, I recommend that the law be so amended as to provide for the ultimate settlement of this matter on terms satisfactory to our own Government and that of the Philippine Islands.

I do not believe that other provisions of the original law need be changed at this time. Where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that they can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples.

May I emphasize that while we desire to grant complete independence at the earliest proper moment, to effect this result without allowing sufficient time for necessary political and economic adjustments would be a definite injustice to the people of the Philippine Islands themselves little short of a denial of independence itself. To change, at this time, the economic provisions of the previous law would reflect discredit on ourselves.

In view of the fact that the time element is involved, I suggest that the law be amended as I have above suggested and that the time limit for the acceptance of the law by the proper authorities and by the people of the Philippine Islands be sufficiently extended to permit them to reconsider it.

For 36 years, the relations between the people of the Philippine Islands and the people of the United States have been friendly and of great mutual benefit. I am confident that if this legislation is passed by the Congress and accepted by the Philippines we shall increase the mutual regard between the two peoples during the transition period. After the attainment of actual independence by them, friendship and trust will live.

Lerroux Faces Cabinet Policy

Premier's Leaning to Right Infuriates Spanish Socialists.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Madrid, March 2.—Undisturbed by threats of Socialist reprisals, Alejandro Lerroux, named to succeed himself as premier of Spainfi began formation of a new govrenment today.

Labor disputes complicate the political scene. Radical Republican cohorts of Lerroux said the government would take a Centrist form and be supported by all Rightest and Republican minorities save one.

Following a conference with President Zamora, the premier-desgnate said the cabinet would not be completed tonight, but would be formed some time tomorrow.

Commenting on the possibility of disorders Monday if employers resort to lockouts against construction workers, in order to settle definitely labor disputes, Lerroux said he planned to use firm measures to insure peace.

What was interpreted as a definite Socialist threat was made by Pernando de Los Rios, partf leader, who said::

"The situation is more serious than before, as it appears Lerroux has formed a Rightist-dominated government. It is impossible to predict what attitude Socialists may be forced to take."

Shortly before President Zamora selected Lerroux to head the cabinet again, Socialist leaders issued a challenge, enumerating their complaints against the government's course.

"There has never been in history such a serious parliamentary situation in Spain," they asserted. "Congress should be immediately dissolved."

Hazen Upholds Police Board's Bribery Action

Bauer and Schleichert Lose Jobs Despite Acquittal in Supreme Court.

Patrolmen Harry G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert yesterday lost their last chance to remain in the Police Department when the District Commissioners affirmed the verdict of guilty returned by the Police Trial Board on charges preferred following alleged bribe-taking.

Bauer and Schleichert, who were members of the liquor squad, were acquitted of the bribery charges in the District Supreme Court, but they were subsequently brought before the Police Trial Board on charges of conduct prejudicial to the Police Department.

The testimony in the case before the Police Trial Board was reviewed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who recommended the conviction be affirmed and the men dismissed.

The policemen were arrested by Capt. J. E. Bobo after they were alleged to have accepted a bribe of $50 from Albert H. Dudley to protect him from bootlegging charges.

Katharine Cornell Again Proves That "The Road" Is Not Dead, Only Sleeping

Receipts Soar To New Record For One Night

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The so-called double-column "lead" in the dramatic department of The Sunday Post, indulging a retrospective mood, will say that the number of dramatic stars of the first flight on tour this season might almost be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Whether or not this is literally true, it appears that at least one or two of the meager number who still dare the vicissitudes of what we continue to refer to humorously as "the road" are finding their adventure a profitable one. This naturally would lead around to Katharine Cornell.

Miss Cornell, as every one knows, is now engaged on the longest tour she has ever made of the Far West and Southwest. Audiences have sat up half the night waiting for her floodbound train to arrive and make it possible for her to give a performance. They have then sat up the other half, watching the stage being set and the play enacted.

A Rare Tribute.

The latest evidence of the continuous triumph Miss Cornell is enjoying is as follows and comes, as goes without saying, from that most punctilious of publicists, Mr. Ray Henderson:

"Blase Dallas, which once infuriated Broadway's Morris Gest by declining to send a reception committee to the Union Terminal, was more hospitable and naively worshipful Sunday night, when Katharine Cornell arrived to bring two days of drama to the Melba. Several hundred enthusiasts braved the coldest weather of the year and whiled away two hours at the station awaiting the actress' train from Amarillo. Some lost patience and went home, but most of the crowd stood watch until their heroine appeared, her dachshund, Sonia, in her arms and the celebrated spaniel, Flush, on a leash.

"Surprised at her reception, she did no more than walk straight into the midst of the crowd, grasp a few by the hand, and then in famous contralto tones remark, 'You are perfect dears to do this for me. And on such a night, too!'

"One of the 'mob' spoke up, 'We wanted to let you know we have waited a long time for you and are happy that you are here.'"

May Be Only Sleeping!

Later Miss Cornell said that her Dallas reception "swept her off her feet. It is thrilling to bring our plays to a city which is so gracious as to give us such an unusual welcome before it even has seen our act."

Since Walter Hampden, Ethel Barrymore, Eddie Cantor and George Jessel and numerous others who have braved the terrors of a supposedly defunct hinterland, have met with the same surprisingly cordial receptions, one finds it a little difficult to convince himself that "the road" actually is as dead as it is represented to be by those of more feeble courage.

The statistical aspects of Miss Cornell's tour in her repertoire of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Candida" and "Romeo and Juliet" are interesting. Up to the time of Mr. Henderson's helpful bulletin, the company had traveled 9,467.6 miles. Of the original itinerary there remained to be traveled 6,193.1 miles. The number of cities included on the tour is 78. The largest single night's receipts amount to $5,167.50, a sum considerably in excess of what more than one attraction this season has played to in a week!

This record box-office "take" was registered in the Denver City Auditorium on February 13, the bill for that evening being the Rudolf Besier Barrett-Browning romance that has proved a record-breaker ever since the night Miss Cornell opened in it. As a book, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is in its eleventh edition.

Workshop Drama.

Plans are being made by the Players Club of Central Community Center for an informal evening of short plays within the coming month—to be given workshop fashion—on the stage of Central High School Auditorium in the presence of an invited audience.

The plays will be followed by a social program under the direction of a committee composed of Miss Evelyn Schweizer, chairman; Miss Nancy Haas and the Misses Mary Elizabeth Kunna, Dorothy Riess, Carolyn Sebastian, Mary Louise Stafford nd Effie Wade.

The play, "A Minuet," by Louis N. Parker, author of "Disraeli," directed by Miss Lucy Ann Rogers, was the contribution of the Players Club to the recent one-act play tournament, conducted by the Community Center Department.

Speaking of the recent one-act play tourney, this column wishes to acknowledge gratefully a pleasant call from Miss Romaine Stevens, of the cast of Theodore Tiller, jr.'s, "Trio of Triangles," and cordial notes from Miss Lois Alexander, a member of the cast of the Columbia Players' prize-winning "The Giant's Stair," and Miss Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center department, all of whom are deeply interested in the idea suggested last Sabbath of a real Little Theater for the National Capital. There have been some telephone calls, too, so something may come out of all this, after all. Stranger things have happened.

"Lest We Forget."

The learned Mr Ray Brown, music critic of The Post, who, as you will soon discover, is a better speller than I could ever hope to be, especially in Russian, goes to the trouble of one-fingering me the following reminder on his streamlined L. C. Smith:

Two performances, matinee and evening, will be given by the famous Monte Carlo Ballet Russe next Sunday in the National Theater, under the local management of the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau. After playing for seven weeks in the St. James Theater, New York City, the company is now on tour before returing to Manhattan for another stay of a month.

Leonide Massine, formerly with the Diaghilev Ballet Russe, is the artistic director of this troupe, which includes in its personnel Leon Voizikovski, David Lichine, Andre Eglevski, Paul Petrov, Yurek Shabelevski Irina Barnova, Alexandro Danilova, Tatyana Ryabushinskat, Tamara Tumanova and Nina Vershina. The company carries its own orchestra, under the direction of Efrem Kurtz.

The Bills.

At the matinee performance the ballets will be "Les Sylphides" with music by Chopin; "La Concurrence" ("Competition"), with book and costumes by Andre Derain and music by the French modernist, George Aurice, and "Le Beau Danube," with music by Johann Strauss, the Younger.

The evening program will present Schumann's "Carnival," with the settings and costumes designed by Leon Gakst; "La Scola di Ballo" (School of the Dance"), with music by Boccherini, and "Le Beau Danube"—repeated because this has proved to be the most popular ballet in the company's repertoire.

Stepin Fetchit, the Senegambian comic, whose drollery is undergoing a sort of renaissance on the Fox lot in Movietone City, where he was for many months on the black list—and I don't mean what you mean, although it would not be too bad a pun, if I did—borrowed his stage name from a race horse he used to hostle when his aspirations did not extend beyond those of stable boy. His real tag is Lincoln Perry and he was born in Key West, Fla. His first name, of course, is inexplicable. His first job was rubbing race horses and he made his first appearance as an entertainer with a street carnival company and his theatrical debut in "In Old Kentucky." His first picture was "The Ghost Talks." He once came to Washington unannounced, A. W. O. L., from a movie location at Annapolis, and had himself a time. That was the beginning of the end.

Selah.

I'll even do better than that. This is not the beginning of the end. This is it!

Seatrain Lines Ask $3,500,000 Damage of U. S.

(Associated Press.)

A suit to collect $3,500,000 in alleged damages from the Government was filed yesterday by Seatrain Lines, Inc., which charged the Government failed to carry out a mail contract entered into in 1931.

Graham M. Brush, president of Seatrain iLnes, claimed in his petition to the Court of Claims his company had carried out its part of the contract at a cost of several million dollars, but had received no Government compensation.

The contract, Brush said, required Seatrain Lines to build two vessels in an American shipyard and to operate such vessels between New Orleans and Havana, and in addition carry foreign mails on such trips.

"Seatrain Lines, Inc.," the company president declared, "having performed all of its obligations under the contract, including the building of the vessels at a cost of several million dollars, the operation of such for a period of 17 months and the carrying of the mails without receiving any compensation whatsoever, has decided to take the matter to the Court of Claims."

The failure of the Government to carry out the obligation, Brush charged, was the result of the failure of Congress to appropriate funds.

The suit, Brush pointed out, should not be construed as having any connection with the present controversy over mail contracts.

It was recalled by Brush that the award of the contract to Seatrain Lines was opposed by Seatrain's competitors.

Luke Lea Wins Time Extension In Bank Appeal

Former Senator and Son Get 60 Days to File High Court Brief.

Luke Lea, former United States Senator from Tennessee, and his eldest son, Luke Lea, jr., yesterday were granted by Justice Brandeis an extension of 60 days from March 8 in which to file a petition in the Supreme Court asking a review of the order of the Tennessee Eupreme Court holding them for extradition to North Carolina to serve prison sentences.

The Leas were convicted in Asheville in August, 1931, on charges growing out of the failure of the Central Bank & Trust Co., a $17,000,000 institution of that city.

Since then they have twice sought reviews by the Supreme Court without success and more recently have been fighting extradition to North Carolina.

The main defense suggested by the Ieas in the papers filed yesterday was an attack on the jurisdiction of the North Carolina courts to try them for a crime which they stated was alleged to have been committed in North Carolina when they were not in that State.

Clarence Darrow and Arthur Garfield Hays, acting as counsel for the Leas, asserted an extension of time for filing a petition asking a review was made necessary in part by the financial troubles of the Leas and the necessity of counsel to study a voluminous record of 2,900 pages of the habeas corpus proceedings in Tennessee which they declared North Carolina insisted should be printed.

Counsel stated the Leas were now able to raise sufficient funds to print the records and that they would be prepared to properly present the case within the next two weeks.

Under the rules of the court the time for filing the petition would have expired March 8.

$2,700,000 More District Relief Asked

$341,000 Is Granted by Fera for Aid Work This Month.

The District Commissioners today will ask the Burget Bureau to approve a supplemental estimate of $2,700,000 for relief needs during the fiscal year 1935 to be taken from an anticipated surplus of $5,000,000 in District revenues.

Earlier, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration announced a grant of $280,000 to pay for relief needs during March and an additional $61,000 for transient relief.

Federal CWA headquarters also notified Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA, that his request for $25,000 for materials to complete the swimming pools at the Banneker and Takoma Park Recreation Centers had been approved. The pools are about 60 per cent completed.

The $2,700,000 to be asked by the District Commissioners is exclusive of $1,300,000 already in the estimates. This sum, Commissioner George E. Allen declared, is totally inadequate, and he estimates at least $9,000,000 will be needed for relief purposes during 1935.

All relief funds in the District had been exhausted before the announcement of the new grant by the FERA.

Knapp Visions Sales Gain This Year in Speech at Mayflower.

John H. Knapp, vice president of the Norge Corporation, a division of Borg-Warner Corporation, yesterday predicted the greatest sales in the history of electric refrigeration in an address before approximately 350 deaelrs in a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday held under the auspices of the Columbia Wholesalers, Inc.

"There are many local evidences," said Mr. Knapp, that conditions here are paralleling the progress of National recovery. A new spirit of buoyant hope has replaced depression fears. Sales have already shown a major upswing. We expect to double our business in this area this year.

"In launching a great spring sales drive soon, we will greatly expand our use of newspaper advertising here because we consider it to be the one indispensable medium of public education. In fact, it is the greatest show window and shopping center in American life.

"Long before a buyer declares her interest to a tradesman, she resorts to newspaper advertising to make her comparisons and mental purchases. The newspaper, therefore, performs one of the most beneficial economic functions known."

CWA Kickback Probe Sought

North Dakota Pay Levies Investigation Bring Iskes' Request.

Grand jury action oon an elleged "kick-back" system in North Dakota in connection with PWA and CWA work was requested yesterday by Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, in a report to Attorney General Cummings, the Associated Press reports.

The specific finding of the public works division of investigation was that workers on CWA and PWA projects were assessed 5 per cent of their wages.

"We are not charging anybody with anything, but as the result of an investigation we are stating to the Atttorney General that somebody on behalf of the governor has been assessing workers 5 per cent of their wages," Ickes said.

Ickes said inspectors are on the ground to see that the assessments do not continue, since the public works allotments would still be disbursed within the State.

Dr. Wynekoop Denies Slaying Wife of Her Son

Crowd in Court Thrills as Elderly Physician Nears Breakdown.

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Self possessed except for one emotional collapse, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today denied from the witness stand any knowledge of the grewsome "operating room murder."

"I neither shot nor chloroformed Rheta," she testified.

How her daughter-in-law, Rheta, met her death in Dr. Wynekoop's surgery was as much of a mystery to her as to anyone, she insisted.

Her one collapse came as she described how she found the girl's body. Then her stoical reserve was swept away and her colorless lips trembled as the 63-year-old physician sought to speak. Her ashen face was contorted and she gasped for breath.

Carried to Stand.

Tears welled in her eyes and, after a struggle during which the crowd of spectators held its breath as one person, she said:

"Her face was a peculiar color. It indicated—death."

So ill since the death of Rheta that her first trial had been called off before she testified, she had kept up her determination to see the case through. Even today she had to be carried to the witness box in a chair while the jury was excluded at request of the prosecution.

The courtroom was jammed when Dr. Wynekoop took the stand. During her testimony the heat became oppressive and the stuffiness of the room increased. Judge Harry B. Miller finally ordered the center aisle, which had been filled with standing spectators, cleared and more windows opened. One woman fainted outside the courtroom, where additional hundreds battled for admission.

A half dozen times the defendant declared that the "confession" was the brain child of police questioners.

The assistant State's attorney asked her, she said, "couldn't you say you gave Rheta an anaesthetic to perform a minor operation?"

She told him Rheta "didn't need an operation, and I never gave an anaesthetic alone in my life."

"They told me," she said, "that the worst I'd be guilty of, if I made the statement they suggested, was an indiscretion—bad judgment."

Dr. Wynekoop's breakdown gave the courtroom one of the thrills for which it had come.

Tells of Grilling.

Recovering her composure, she told of the sleepless hours during questioning by police and the culmination in her admission that she fired the shot after the girl had succumbed to an overdose of chloroform.

That admission, she said, was made on the assurance of the police that her son, Earle, who was also being held, would be released.

Dr. Wynekoop testified that Police Capt. John Stege had said, in urging that she make such a statement, that "it would not even call for an indictment," that it involved no crime.

Labor Policy Revision Urged To Rescue NRA

Action Needed in Present "Dangerous Situation," Says State Head.

(United Press.)

A new labor union policy, fair to workers as well as employers, with prompt and effective enforcement, was recommended here yesterday to meet a "dangerous situation" in the recovery program by Edward A. Filene, Boston department store head, who said he had just completed a six weeks' Nation-wide tour studying recovery progress.

Growth of company unions and lack of enforcement of NRA's labor policy provided the severest and only important criticism he found in conferences in 14 important cities, Filene said. He recommended a conference of leading employers and labor leaders to formulate new policies and techniques for handling union questions.

"My study tour has convinced me," he said, "that this is the most important question bearing on the continued success of recovery plans, and therefore it should be done as quickly as possible and on an adequate scale of representation."

Urges Decentralization.

Filene made a number of other recommendations, such as decentralization of recovery efforts with a more definite power and responsibility for enforcement given to State directors; more repesentation of small business conditions. Questionnaires were submitted to meetings in every city and he consulted labor leaders, union officials and the public wherever possible.

Calls It's Greatest Danger.

"I became convinced the greatest danger to recovery plans is connected with labor policy, and that with few exceptions these dangers in regard to labor relations were growing. Employers generally are afraid of the growth of labor union strength possible under the recovery act, and they do not intend to allow A. F. of L. unions to be successfully organized," he said.

He said he found many cases where employers were forming company unions and discharging employes active in outside unions. Local NRA labor authorities, or those in Washington, were unable to enforce labor rights in these cases, Filene added. He asserted he found a general complaint that the recovery plan was too highly centralized in Washington, and advised that State directors be given authority.

Price-Wages Balance Chief NRA Problem, Says Johnson

public will have opportunity to hear the address by radio.

Despite the avalanche of criticism during the week, Gen. Johnson still maintained confidence in NRA. He said he had been deluged with suggestions for a Field Day for supporters of NRA, but had refused to consider the idea.

"This is not a popularity contest," he said. "We have the support of industry, of labor and of the people of the United States. We will continue to have it as long as we deserve it, and when we no longer deserve it, we ought not to have it.

"Of course, there has been some diatribe and exaggeration. I am sorry I could not be in five places at once, and especially that I could not have welcomed Mrs. Pinchot and discussed some of her statements with her—especially about certain labor cases in Pennsylvania.

"Apparently, Mrs. Pinchot does not know that these are not in the jurisdiction or control of NRA at all. These are the province of the National Labor Board which is wholly independent of NRA. When she held us responsible for Pennsylvania towns where labor meetings could not be held, I should have liked to ask her who was Governor of that State."

Refers to Minor Tilts.

Alluding to his verbal tilts with Robert Minor, the Communist leader who spoke at several group meetings, Gen. Johnson said "I enjoyed my colloquy with Mr. Minor but, of course, that criticism was political and designed for the overthrow of our Government. I do not mean that there was any lack of sincerity there, but I do mean that the overthrow of Government is not before NRA for discussion."

Gen. Johnson said the criticisms offered during the Field Day did not exceed the 12 points he outlined at the opening, but only added a useful wealth of detail concerning them.

"Much was said in the hearings about the so-called failure of NRA to cure unemployment and produce recovery," Gen. Johnson continued. "That charge also flows from an omission to recognize that NRA is only one piece in the whole mosaic of the President's recovery program.

"It is charged with only one small part of the job. Nobody ever dreamed or suggested that NRA, acting alone, could cure unemployment or produce recovery. It is only 1 of a 20-mule team—all the units of which are doing their level best in a general plan of cooperation to aid every actual force of recovery that can be helped by governmental policy and action.

"We are immensely pleased with what has happened here and we promise you to be diligent, faithful and fearless in trying to capitalize on the lessons learned and to bring NRA as near to efficiency and justice as we know how to bring it."

Dozing spectators at the last session were aroused shortly before Gen. Johnson appeared when Representative Carl Wiedeman (Democrat), Michigan, appeared to answer assertions made earlier this week that his name had appeared on the letterhead of an alleged industrial espionage agency in Detroit.

It was asserted by Matthew Smith, representing the Mechanics Educational Society of America, that Representative Wiedeman's name was carried as a director of the "Dawn Patrol," which, he said, had sent letters to motor manufacturers, offering to spy on employes' labor meetings.

Halts Man's Exit.

Representative Wiedeman, large, round and anxious to offend no one, mounted the rostrum and called out in a loud voice: "I wish Mr. Smith to hear what I am about to say; I see him going out the door now."

All spectators craned in the direction indicated and saw a small, dark-haired man who was just going out of the door turn around and return.

"I want to hear you," Smith said. "I didn't know you by sight."

The representative said he had not authorized the use of his name by the "Dawn Patrol" or any other detective agency. He read a letter to Ernest A. Provo, head of the agency, in which he said:

"I have been for years fighting the cause of the worker, and will continue to do so. And now you come along and print my name as a director of your agency, when, as a matter of fact, I would not know you if I saw you. You know I have never attended any kind of a meeting with you anywhere at any time. I have never been in your office, nor have I ever been given or purchased any stock in your company. Nor did I ever sign any incorporation or any other papers concerning your company."

He ordered the use of his name discontinued.

Smith, insisting upon being heard again over some protests from the Chair, said that Representative Wiedeman had known long ago that his name was being used in this way, but had said nothing until the matter became public.

"I can imagine him on another occasion making another apology," Smith said cryptically by way of a parting shot pointed toward next fall's elections.

L. A. Van Vorst, representing the Employes' Association of the Gulf Refining Co., of New York, generally known as a Mellon company, criticized the wage policy of his company.

Charges Unfair Competition.

"We operate under the petroleum code, but it might as well be in China as in New York," Van Vorst said. "We are on a 20 to 25 per cent lower wage scale than other companies in the same territory. I ask you, is that fair competition? Other companies sell at the same price as ours, therefore our company is profiteering."

Former Representative L. B. Rainey, of Gadsden, Ala., declared his city was full of code violations. He declared the Gulf Steel Co. is threatening to discharge men who join unions. Another company, he said, is paying both skilled and unskilled labor 30 cents an hour, whereas the code minimum is 32½ cents. Complaints to the Chamber of Commerce have brought no relief, he said, because the chamber is all tied up with the city's business interests.

"They work on a principle of 'you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours,' and there is only one hope," he said. "Send us disinterested parties to settle the differences and enforce the codes or, mark my words, gentlemen, we will have strikes by June, with the possibility of trouble, bloodshed and destruction of property which such disturbances so often bring in their train."

Dayton Music Fete to Honor Song Writers

Program to Feature Three College Glee Clubs and Chorus.

Dayton, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Prof. J. H. Ruebush, dean of the Conservatory of Music at Shenandoah College, completed final arrangements here today for the music festival which Dayton will hold Sunday to honor Dr. John W. Wayland and Prof. Will H. Ruebush, authors of the State song, "Old Virginia."

Held in Shenandoah College Church here, the music will be furnished by the largest orchestra ever assembled in the Valley, and the following three college glee clubs will sing: the Harrisonburg State Teachers College Glee Club, the Bridgewater College Glee Club and the Shenandoah College Choir.

Special musical arrangements of "Old Virginia" will be sung, and the three college clubs will furnish a grand finale with the "Hallelujah Chorus," accompanied by organ, piano and orchestra.

The words of the song were written in 1910 by Dr. Wayland while he was a member of the faculty at Harrisonburg Teachers College. Later, Prof. Ruebush composed the music to give Virginia an entry in the State Book of Songs, then being published at Dayton. Curiously, Prof. Ruebush is the great-grandson of Joseph Funk, noted for establishing the first song book publishing plant in Virginia at Singer's Glen, 97 years ago.

German Language Popularity Found Increasing in Schools

Richmond, March 2 (AP).—The German language, which was all but divorced from school curricula as a result of the World War, is regaining its popularity, G. J. Lux, of the John Marshall High School faculty, writes in the current issue of the Virginia Journal of Education.

Attendance figures issued by the Federal Bureau of Education, he said, show the trend is again upward.

In 1915 there were 312,358 students enrolled in German classes in public and private schools, he said. In 1925 the enrollment was only 32,870, with German surrendering its first place ranking to French, with Spanish in second position. By 1928, he points out, the enrollment figures had jumped to 64,184.

Statistics for colleges and all other higher institutions of learning show a similar tendency, Mr. Lux said. He cited an increase of 170 per cent in the German language enrollment of colleges and universities of New York City for the period 1927-30.

For 1933, he continued, the State Board of Education reported three high schools in Virginia teaching German, with an enrollment of 167.

Bourckel was born in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, and came to the United States when 21 years of age. He has lived here 23 years, and says he has never taken an active part in politics before. He is a yard conductor for the Baltimore & Ohio.

Praising the conservative management of Virginia's fiscal policy, Mr. Johns said a number of States, such as Illinois, Michigan and New Jersey, had piled up huge public debts in the past 20 years.

"These huge debts are one of the most serious obstacles in the way of business recovery," declared Mr. Johns. "I believe a business-like refunding and scaling down of obligations should be worked out."

Hungerford conferred here Monday with employers and employes and was informed that the paramount question is whether the Government will enforce the codes.

"Some employers raised questions of a constitutionality element," Hungerford said. "The Government has no doubt about the constitutionality of this law."

Auto dealers have expressed themselves as particularly well pleased with their code. Other employers, however, said at the conference with Hungerford that they could not hope to continue to live up to their codes unless the NRA eliminated chiselers.

Liquor Ads Legal In West Virginia

Basic School Salary Law Also in Effect.

A new statute, repealing a previous law, became effective without the signature of Gov. H. G. Kump. It was sponsored by Delegate J. P. Beacom (Democrat), Cabell.

Two other bills also have become effective without the signature of the Governor. One provides for the State payment of basic salaries for school teachers for eight months instead of four. The source of revenue for carrying this into effect has not yet been determined, but it will be included in the general revenue bill.

The other measure concerns the legal profession and relates to the recording of deeds, contracts, powers of attorney and like instruments.

My Word!

That's All Needed Now For West Virginia Drink.

Charleston, W. Va., March 2 (AP).—After this in dry West Virginia a citizen can go into a drug store and say:

"I hereby certify I'm sick."

And the drug store is authorized to sell him as much whisky as he wants.

The Legislature yesterday decreed that physicians' prescriptions are no longer needed to buy medicinal whisky if the purchaser will sign a certificate saying he needs it. The bill goes to the Governor.

West Virginia still has constitutional prohibition. State repeal will be voted on in November.

Caroline Levy Up 5 Cents

County Orders Increase to Meet Operating Expenses.

Bowling Green, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Decision that a 20-cent levy would not provide sufficient funds to pay the operating expenses of the county government has led the Caroline County supervisors to increase the levy for general county purposes to 25 cents in the tentative budget for 1934.

The proposed increase returns the county tax levy to the 1932 figure, set after the 60-cent levy for road purposes was eliminated by reason of the State's taking over county roads. Last year the county levy was reduced from 25 to 20 cents when the county road fund was transferred to the general county fund, but with exhaustion of the fund a 20-cent levy is insufficient for county expenses.

Citizens of the county will appear to speak for or against the proposed budget at a supervisors' meeting the first Monday in April.

The supervisors also went on record as protesting the reduction to 231 men in the Civil Works allotment of workers to Caroline County.

Virginia Leading In Highway Work

Ahead of National Average on PWA Projects.

The Bureau of Public Roads said yesterday that highway construction in Virginia under the $400,000,000 Public Works Fund "is well above the average for the whole country," according to the Associated Press.

On February 24, the bureau said, 93.5 per cent of the Old Dominion's $7,416,757 allotment had been put to work. Of the $400,000,000 spread over the land, 74.5 per cent was under contract.

Virginia had advertised 183 projects to cost $7,151,000, 130 projects contracted for and 4,601 men actually at work. Public works involved in the projects advertised totaled $6,934,000, other Federal and State funds making up the remainder.

use of Civil Works funds on the Chairman Buchanan opposed the ground that Congress had adopted an amendment to the District appropriations bill forbidding the use of them for nursery schools. He held the intent of the amendment was that money, even though not included in the appropriation, should not be used for that purpose.

Miss Jacobs said the schools lacked cots for afternoon naps. She indicated the children either must do without sleep, or the schools would close early.

War Contract Graft Inquiry Is Authorized

Hampshire Representative. These matters relate not only to property and lives, but to the very integrity of the Nation itself."

Rogers, decrying the application of the phrase "legalized murder" to six recent Army flying fatalities, gave figures since 1923 showing 480 pilots had been killed on active duty, and demanded to know if those now attacking the Administration had thought to apply the expression to these deaths.

Fish Roundly Scored.

It remained for Mead, chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, to administer to Fish the crowning verbal spanking.

"Enough of this sob stuff!" he shouted, after recounting recent utterances of his fellow New Yorker concerning the six deaths.

Very red in the face, Fish asked if he could interrupt.

"No, I will not yield," exclaimed Mead. "I have little enough time as it is to answer ten speeches the gentleman has made on this subject lately."

Mead went on to insist that Army planes were the safest type for flying the air mail; that they were as well equipped as commercial planes, "or better;" that the Army pilots were adequately trained for the task, and that the deaths were due to extraordinary weather conditions.

Republican members of the House, including Mrs. Rogers, of Massachusetts, Fish and others, sought vainly to interrupt, and finally resorted to booing as Mead proceeded.

Referring to the assertions that the dead fliers had been "sacrificed," Mead declared:

"Gen. Foulois has refused to stand for the coddling and pampering that, in my judgment, is mostly all political.

"If the attacks continue, I, for one, will stand out against any legislation for the War Department until the honor of the Army and the Air Corps has been vindicated against thrusts from the Republican side of the House."

Politics to Be Barred.

Members of the Military Affairs Committee, embarrassed by the partisan turn the brief debate had taken, assured the House there would be no politics in the investigation.

"It is not the intention of the committee to exercise partisanly the power asked of the House," McSwain said.

"We will not besmirch anyone on hearsay evidence. This will be no fishing party for scandal or slander.

"But, there will be no whitewashing."

Explaining why the committee asked $10,000 for investigators and other expenses, McSwain said that while the probe had been under way for some time, in certain instances "our efforts have been frustrated by skillful evasion."

Representative McGugin (Republican), Kansas, introduced the subject of Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, saying that recent investigation by the District grand jury and newspaper accounts thereof had somewhat put his fellow Kansan "under a cloud."

McGugin favored the proposed inquiry as an opportunity for "this great Kansan" to clear his name, adding:

"I would be amazed if it should develop that Harry Woodring were guilty of malfeasance."

Hill assured McGugin that Woodring already had "made a most unusually favorable impression on the sub-committee," and had shown a disposition to be "very helpful."

Blasts Planned If Thaw Perils Chain Bridge

Protection of Arlington Water Supply Is Aim of Engineers.

If Chain Bridge is threatened with destruction by ice in the event of a sudden thaw, Federal and Arlington County engineers will use dynamite to prevent such a happening, they indicated yesterday. The span carries Arlington County's water supply.

The decision to use dynamite if necessary was reached at a conference between C. L. Kininer, county engineer, and E. P. Hardy, Federal engineer at Dalecarlia in charge of the water supply.

They believe that a sudden break-up of the ice on the river would endanger the bridge.

Smith (Democrat, of Alexandria. Virginia gasoline dealers complained they were losing business to the District because of the lower local tax. The Virginia tax is 4 cents.

Whitaker Loses Suit Against His Bondsman

"Fox" Fails in Fight to Regain Payment in Lindbergh Case.

Norman T. Whitaker, known as "The Fox" in the scheme by which Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean was to have turned over to the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby some $35,000 in good money in return for $50,000 in "ho money," yesterday lost in the District Supreme Court his fight to regain from his bondsman the premium he paid on a bond.

After his arrest in connection with the McLean case, Whitaker secured his release on bond from Milton Kronheim. He subsequently was convicted here of conspiring with Gaston B. Means to steal $35,000 from Mrs. McLean, and shortly afterward the Circuit Court of Florida sustained his conviction there on a charge of violating the Dyer act, which prohibits interstate transportation of stolen automobiles.

After the Florida action Kronheim surrendered Whitaker and the latter retaliated by asking that his premium be returned. In upholding the bondsman, Justice Peyton Gordon said that the latter was in law the "keeper" of the person on whose bond he was, and he declined to interfere. Justice Gordon said that the bondsman was entitled to surrender his man at any time.

Whitaker is serving 18 months for his attempt to obtain money from Mrs. McLean, though he has appealed. In Florida he was given 2 years. Means, found guilty of stealing $104,000 from Mrs. McLean, is serving 15 years, and an 18 months' sentence concurrently.

Manorisms.

In the latest English "estate-catalogue" devised to beguile America's prospective expatriates, an advertiser commands: "Live in a Pleasing Moated Manor House!" It seems to us that the correct response is "Why?"

However, that advertiser knows the weaknesses of his clientele. The only people who would really yearn to live in a "Moated Manor House," pleasing or otherwise, are those who, at home, insist upon having every modern convenience and floors carefully insulated against a drop of damp. In other words: Americans.

And it is dollars (old style) to doughnuts that if the English owner catches a client he will spend the rental on a London flat with an American heating system, plumbing and every other mechanistic gadget no self-respecting feudal "Moated Manor House" would tolerate.

Noblesse Oblige.

A painful lack of discriminating standards among the sons of several prominent officials has been revealed by the Senate committee investigating mail contracts. In most cases the efforts of these young men to capitalize their fathers' prestige may be entirely legal. But aside from the technicalities of law, it is anything but admirable to find young men accepting emoluments under the pretense of using their fathers' influence in behalf of private concerns that are engaged in business with the Government.

Tradition as well as ethics forbid the employment of close relatives of prominent officials for lobbying and propaganda work. It is possible, of course, that the son of a Senator could represent an aviation company seeking a contract with the Postoffice Department without engaging in any dishonest practice or using any improper influence. But those who wish to keep a family name untarnished will remember, like Caesar's wife, that action must be such as not to cause suspicion.

It seems that cases of this kind are numerous. Nor are they peculiar to any one party. While administration and congressional leaders are framing legislation to bar lawyers holding high political offices from practicing before Government departments, the use of political influence by the relatives of high officials ought not to be overlooked. It may not be possible to draft a law that will reach all who attempt to sell political influence, but where sense of family honor is dead other safeguards must be applied.

A Near-Tragedy.

By an amazing stroke of luck the Commonwealth of Massachusetts this week escaped perpetrating one of the most terrible miscarriages of justice in its legal history. It had, through the zeal of a politically-minded district attorney, all but convicted of murder two men now found to have been 17 miles distant from the shooting at the time of its occurrence. Their arrest came when Greater Boston was terrified by a series of bank robberies which netted nearly $100,000 loot. During these various holdups at least six murders were committed. State police and National Guard armories had been rifled of firearms, while police flurried in circles seeking suspects, staging raids and making arrests.

Among those seized were two Boston taxi drivers accused of, and indicted for, a murder in a theater holdup in Lynn. With a speed unusual in modern criminal procedure they were brought to trial by District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg. They were penniless and the Commonwealth supplied them with attorneys. The case, as reported in the newspapers, was notorious for its many gaps in the chain of circumstantial evidence against the men. But no less than eight persons, in the theater at the time of the senseless killing, identified the taxi drivers with positive assurance.

Just as the case was ready for the jury and a conviction seemed inevitable, detectives rounded up the notorious Millen brothers and their accomplice, Abraham Faber. The latter confessed to the crime of the Lynn slaying, implicating others, and corroborating evidence was found in Boston, New York and Washington. The abashed district attorney withdrew his case, and the judge ordered a verdict of not guilty.

Massachusetts may consider itself lucky to have escaped a repetition of certain elements of the notorious Sacco-Vanzetti case, in which possibly mistaken identity played so important a part. Hysteria, incompetent witnesses, slipshod methods of trying criminal cases, undue haste, and the willingness of elected prosecutors to find victims under the pressure of public demand, are all dangers to the decent administration of justice. But none of them would have excused District Attorney Cregg or the Commonwealth of Massachusetts if Clement Molway and Louis Berrett, innocent men, had been legally murdered for a crime they did not commit.

The Experimental Method.

On Thursday Secretary Morgenthau told a House banking sub-committee that the prices of commodities and gold are "going along together." To demonstrate this, he displayed a chart showing that since February 7, 1933, the world price of gold has increased 68 per cent, while farm commodities have risen 57 per cent. Mr. Morgenthau concludes, therefore, that the gold-buying policy is "working well."

By a most unhappy coincidence the Bureau of Labor Statistics on the same day was announcing a decline in wholesale commodity prices for the week ended February 24, this decline being particularly pronounced in the case of farm products. And on that same day, the price of gold bullion in London reached $34.81 an ounce, the highest dollar equivalent recorded by the London bullion market to date.

Whatever the Secretary of the Treasury may think, current developments do not bear out the assertion that gold and commodity prices are "going along together." Past events lend even less support to the theory of close relationship. For instance, the advance in farm prices last year reached its peak in July, several months before the inauguration of the gold-buying policy. This upward movement was followed by a severe decline which caused the farm products index of the Department of Labor to fall from 62.7 in July to 54.2 in October. Since then farm prices have mounted again, but have not yet reached the level attained last July. Furthermore, the general commodity index has only risen 4 per cent from the low point of October, when gold buying in world markets began.

Meantime, the price of gold has been fixed at $35.00 an ounce and the dollar has been provisionally revalued at 59.06 cents, whereas in July its exchange value stood at 69 per cent of gold parity. The lack of correlation between price movements and changes in the gold value of the dollar is the more pronounced when we consider all the nonmonetary factors, such as the NRA, AAA, CWA, &c., which have been operating to raise prices. In so far as Mr. Morgenthau asks Congress not to make matters worse by further monetary legislation, his plea is well taken. In so far as he argues the success of present policy, it is totally unconvincing.

Concerning the past, the Secretary of the Treasury has definite, although mistaken, opinions. About the future, unfortunately, he professes to know nothing at all. He refuses to predict the state of affairs six months hence, and he admits that if prices should suddenly "take a nose dive" he would appear before Congress to urge some new kind of monetary experiment. This modest disavowal of certainty and the professed willingness to try again if the present policy fails would have more appeal if they were not voiced by a public official charged with responsibility for the financial and monetary welfare of the country. When a patient is on the operating table it is not a disarming modesty but a convincing background of expert knowledge which he expects to find in the surgeon.

Box-Office Boxing.

It's a long cry to that day when William Hazlitt made his famous journey to see a prize fight and wrote for a London newspaper an account so graphic that all the Paul Gallicos and Bill Cunninghams of more than a century have never equaled it. The beginning of the nineteenth century was an age when fights were fights. Men gathered outdoors to watch the leaders of "the Fancy" mix it up. They traveled long distances, they bet many a pound, and, if Hazlitt is to be believed, the fights themselves were glorious, primitive events. So it was in this country back when John L. and the other boozers of a lusty day fought to a finish—when the police weren't looking.

Then came the transformation of sport into big business, if not into a racket. It began, probably, in Shelby, Mont., when the Fancy's followers trekked by the hundreds in the heat to that little spot to watch the Dempsey-Gibbons show. We need not recount all the other fights of recent years, ballyhooed to the limit, attended by Society, raved about for months before and after in the press. Those days, alas, are gone. Color has faded from fighting in an open, resined ring. The day of the press agent has passed and Thursday night a paltry handful of spectators saw a big, ungainly man lumber through a stated period of time with an agile opponent. It wasn't much of a fight, that one in Florida. Nobody really cared anything about it, one way or another.

The sport of fistic battle has fallen on evil days, ruined by the racketeers, aided by the depression. The big business has crashed. It is only a memory, like the land boom in the State where a few people, suffering ennui, saw two unmatched men slap each other with big gloves. It will so remain until color, and glamour, can be brought back. And this can only happen when two men who know how "Get in and fight!" It can only happen when the world has less woe and more time to get excited over the important trivia of the average man's life.

Good For Panama.

Under a treaty signed in 1904, the United States agreed to pay the Republic of Panama $250,000 in gold coin as rental for certain canal lands. In 1934 we are trying to discharge this solemn treaty obligation by offering Panama $250,000, each worth 59 cents in gold. Panama has returned the check with request for payment in full.

Foreigners who have read Congressional outbursts about war debt defaulters and other offenders against this creditor country will probably be provoked to sardonic laughter by this latest evidence of the superb inconsistency between our profession and our practice. Of its own volition, without even trying to allege necessity, the Administration has repudiated about 40 per cent of the debt owing to a small and helpless creditor. To every American with a sense of fair play the spectacle must be humiliating.

The next time a Congressman rises to denounce France it is to be hoped that somebody will shout "Panama." There are, of course, a good many other places that might be mentioned when we talk self-righteously about the conscienceless ways of foreign debtors; but Panama is a particularly flagrant instance of repudiation of an external obligation.

What, it may be wondered, would be the reaction if Panama were strong enough to tell us that for 59% of the agreed rental, they would permit us to control just 59% of the canal?

The Field Day.

Representatives of industry, labor and the consuming public flocked to Washington in response to Gen. Johnson's invitation to express their views about the policies and methods of the NRA. The speakers at the various sessions of the "field day" have helped to dissipate any fears that freedom of speech is being suppressed by a dictatorial regimentation of labor and industry. Men and women from all parts of the country—employers and employes, buyers and sellers, public officials and private citizens—all took active part in this national symposium on the NRA, airing their grievances and suggesting changes.

These critics did not waste time expressing a vague general disapproval of existing conditions. They came with constructive proposals for correcting specific abuses. The representatives of labor who complain of chiseling employers and allege intimidation to prevent independent organization of workers, did not urge abolition of the NRA. On the contrary, they demanded better administrative machinery to give effect to what they construe to be the meaning of the law. Similarly, the industrialists who voice various forms of dissatisfaction demanded revision rather than abrogation of the agreements under which they are operating. In brief, the great majority of critics apparently approve the basic principles underlying the NRA. Their attacks are directed against inadequate or bungling machinery.

The immensity of the task laid upon the NRA officials has, of course, made it impossible to organize and discipline effectively the thousands of industrial units hastily brought under code agreements. Years, indeed decades, might be spent in developing and perfecting the integrated elastic business structure that is the objective of the NRA. Furthermore, a Federal bureaucracy can never be flexible enough and should never be powerful enough to undertake all the policing required to assure successful enforcement of codes. The Government must depend upon capital and labor to cooperate in this work to the fullest extent if anything like success is expected. This means minimization of governmental interference.

The authorities should be encouraged by the kind of criticism that the "field day" has brought forth, because it shows that the public is genuinely concerned to support the experiment. What it asks is speedy action to eliminate abuses, more prompt attention to complaints and final elimination of the absurd attitude which feigns to see something unpatriotic and undesirable in constructive criticism. That last phase of the NRA, we may hope, is now gone for good.

Meddling In New York.

Reapportionment of New York City's representation in the Legislature at Albany has been given a unique boost by President Roosevelt. He has ordered the Federal Census Bureau to make a special tabulation of citizens and aliens in the five counties making up New York, to be financed by CWA funds. It is expected that this survey will make possible the first reapportionment of that metropolis' representation in the State Legislature since 1915.

President Roosevelt's interest in the matter is more understandable than commendable. Tammany Hall, it is said, will lose strength at Albany when the legislative seats are reallocated on the basis of present population, because its strongholds are those areas which are losing their residential character. Any move to minimize the power of Tammany is welcome to the President. Furthermore, he is doubtless anxious to end the disparity of representation between the various sections of New York. But why should a Federal agency be used to bring about these local reforms?

The Federal census, of course, is designed to be a national survey of population. It is not intended for the special convenience of States and municipalities. This appears to be the first time that the Census Bureau has been ordered to tabulate the population of any region by city blocks for an entirely local purpose. And it is doubly curious that New York should be selected first among the numerous States confronted with the necessity of reapportioning the seats in their legislative chambers.

Whither Are We Going?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is the NRA a help or detriment to National recovery? The sooner this question is solved the better, and the proof of the pudding is the eating thereof. Here is a practical demonstration of price fixing, wage raising and profiteering, without increase of employment or purchasing power, under the NRA.

It was my understanding that hats were being cleaned at 50 cents each, which I figured to be 35 cents per hour for labor and 15 cents profit for the proprietor. I had $1 with which I expected to have two hats cleaned. Upon taking them to the cleaners I was informed that the price had been increased to 65 cents, which I figured to be 40 cents an hour for labor and 25 cents profit for the proprietor. Consequently, I could have but one hat cleaned, and used the other 35 cents for food that is exempt from taxation, with no appreciable benefit to the recovery act.

At the 50-cent rate, the laborers could have been employed at 35 cents per hour each, with a profit of 30 cents to the proprietor, whereas at the present rate but one laborer is employed at 40 cents per hour, with a profit of only 25 cents to the proprietor.

We are still in the middle of the stream wherein the swapping of horses took place. Whither are we going? E. T. GILBERT.

Employment of Women.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There were in the United States in 1930, according to the Bureau of Census, 3,071,302 married women, 5,734,825 single and 1,826,100 widowed and divorced women gainfully employed.

At present, according to the most recent estimates, there are between 5,000,000 and 10,000,000 men and a large number of women unemployed. Many girls, recent graduates of business, teachers' training and high schools, can not obtain employment. As members of a family lose their positions, they move together. In this way many times a girl, if able to find employment, can keep a family together and out of the hands of charity. Married women, now holding positions should be replaced by single girls with responsibilities, married men who need the work and deserving widows.

A House Divided.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That was an instructive letter signed, G. H. McCarthy, declaring the two major political parties had interchanged diametrically opposite points of view concerning States' rights. Why?

There is a solemn warning beneath that joke. This is no more a time for intrusion of partisanship than when we laid politics aside to enter the World War and came off victorious. Now again we must all work together; this time to complete the return of prosperity; or go under in a land so plenteous that laws must be enacted to curtail its productiveness. This is no time for our house to be divided against itself!

A tri-union of National Government, State government and countless groups in a gigantic partnership should make the Stars and Stripes shortly symbolize great wealth in business that should so demonstrate joys of peace that the belligerent Old World would want to adopt our flag and new deal.

Railroad Overcapitalization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your article on the "New Dealers," published February 25, contains a reference to the railroads which seems to indicate that they are overcapitalized.

Permit me to call attention to the statement of Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, which appears on page 3 of Senate Document No. 119, Seventy-third Congress, second session, which reads:

"Contrary to much popular impression, the railroads are not in the aggregate over-capitalized, in the sense that the par value of outstanding securities exceeds the money invested in the properties. The Bureau of Valuation of the Interstate Commerce Commission has estimated that the original cost of railroad carrier property, other than land, as it existed on December 31, 1932, plus land valued as of June 1, 1933, and plus allowances for working capital, was in the neighborhood of $26,232,000,000."

Our War Pictures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Each Sunday brings us fresh pictures of horror from the Great War. Only the most callous of us can fail to shudder at their ghastliness.

In this civilization the big causes for war seem twofold. One is an ever "prepared" highly specialized fighting machine looking for somebody to fight, and the other, a coterie of vampire gold-diggers making profit out of armaments and munitions of war. Given these two factors, a third is necessary. It is a generation indoctrinated in gospels of patriotism of a wrong kind, and of religious and racial prejudices. Then in this mass-mind, it is only necessary to have highly trained psychologists and propagandists hired by the gainseekers and fame-seekers to insert the leaven of a few hate-inspiring stereotypes and slogans—and a war is in the making.

Some say these pictures are intended to stimulate—preparedness. Will preparedness prevent war? Was the Kaiser's bristling machine "unprepared?" Was Britain unprepared? Was France? Who in Europe was unprepared as far as the resources enabled them? Neither Spain, nor notably Switzerland, was prepared and they suffered hardly at all.

No one would advocate rendering a country nationally indefensive. But if war is ever to be outlawed, a different kind of preparedness will be necessary. These horror pictures will fail in their mission if they are to be thought of solely as propaganda for the increase of guns, men and navies. Our best preparedness should be coming through the school houses of America and the world. Right along with goose-stepping and strutting parades to the martial tunes of music that swell the endocrine glands, we should picture the gruesome details of bloody battlefields. Bristling armaments can never prevent war as well as the teaching of tolerance and Christianity. In every secondary school and college there should be courses which have for their objectives the understanding of the sources and causes of most of our silly prejudices of race, religious bigotries and a host of others. Some day we will have such courses instead of many of the innocuous and useless curriculum offerings of an outworn age.

Why She Was Great.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your series of "Half Forgotten Romances" recalls charming episodes in American history. I was particularly interested in that relating to the courtship of Augustine Washington and Mary Ball. Her acceptance of Augustine is one of the most delightful incidents in all the annals of such affairs. She listened with dancing eyes to his flowery protestations of eternal love and devotion, and when he finished, she swept an elaborate courtesy, and said "Yes, and thank you, sir." There was gayety, triumph, gladness and profound respect in her reply.

One can parallel in vision the scene from the lines in H. C. Brunner's exquisite rondeau, long afterward written to his own grandmother, or anybody's grandmother:

"Grandpapa, on his right knee bent,
Wooed her in quaint, old-fashioned phrase—
She was a beauty in the days
When Madison was President."

That is almost a description of Augustine's successful suit.

Another reminiscence is in point. When in the Revolutionary War, Mary Ball's illustrious son was engaged in military operations in and about the Rappahannock district of Virginia, he sent her word that at the first opportunity he would visit Fredericksburg; but delay after delay intervened. One afternoon an aide-de-camp dashed up to the door, and Mrs. Washington happened to open it. Said the messenger: "Madam, His Excellency has dispatched me to announce to you that he will be here within the half hour." Mrs. Washington looked at him benignly and said: "Hm, His Excellency! I'll excellency him when I see him!" Then turning to her colored servant she said: "Mose, bring me a fresh apron." Just the right kind of motherly pride and propriety!

Lovely and loveable as these incidents are, there is a solemn sacredness on another occasion when her reassuring hand rested upon Washington's shoulder as he was meditating the acceptance of the great responsibility of commander in chief of the Colonial forces. Without a word on either side, he accepted.

Yes, she was unaffectedly great!

Shadows of Coming Events?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the February birthdays of our three great American emancipators have come and gone, may I express through your columns the gratitude of women for the increasing recognition which is justly being accorded to Susan B. Anthony as an outstanding figure in American history. This is as it should be. It indicates a growing realization that both men and women built this Republic and should share the honor expressed by a grateful people.

On February 15 it was my valued privilege to hear our great woman eulogized in the halls of Congress, where for 37 consecutive years she made her plea before a Congressional committee for justice to women.

Great events often cast their shadows before, the bard of Avon declared. May it not be that these two speeches delivered by Senator Capper in the Senate and Representative Rogers in the House, recognizing a great woman as a builder of the Nation, have a deeper significance than appears on the surface?

Why should not the mantle of President Roosevelt, who has given women a good break, fall upon the shoulder of a man like Senator Capper? How does the title, Senator Rogers, sound to the women of Massachusetts?

Let us await the logic of events.

The Post Impressionist

He Knew Rasputin.

Postoffice, Saturday.

He read aloud:

"'Mad Monk Cyanide-Proof.'"

That was the headline of a tabloid for its embroidery upon the Princess Youssoupoff's lawsuit alleging the Metro-Goldwyn Rasputin film has libeled her.

Serge—call him so, since it isn't his name—shrugged his shoulders.

"Correct," said he, "except that Rasputin was not mad and not a monk. And nobody knows whether he was or wasn't 'cyanide-proof' because—if by 'cyanide' this sheet means potassium cyanide—nobody ever gave him cyanide."

"But how can you be so sure of all this?"

"Simply enough. I had dealings with him when he was alive. When he died, I—I was none too far away."

• • • •

After all, why not?

Once, here in Washington, we were in a mixed group to which a European political-intelligence officer recounted what his government's secret records contained concerning the assassination of Mexico's President Venustiano Carranza. Every one of us, except a Chinese member of the group, had interrupted with questions. When the story was ended, the Chinaman—of all conceivable nationals!—quietly remarked:

"No, they didn't shoot him through the window. They came in by the door and shot him."

"How," the company chorused, "do you know?"

"Because," this quiet and expressionless Chinese replied, "I was there."

• • • •

Serge resumed:

"Do you call a man mad who can come from nowhere with no backing; who is proud of his ignorance; makes a show of his boorishness; yet climbs, in a few years, to unprecedented rank at an autocrat's court? A man who makes cabinets and unmakes them? A man, mind you, who accomplishes all this of set purpose? Who wins his way by undeviating persistence like the expert chess player?

"If this is madness," said Serge, "there are many lunatics at large in Washington."

• • • •

Serge went on:

"This paper says, and most Americans think, that Rasputin was a bona fide monk and in Holy Orders. I don't believe Youssoupoff so testified. Again and again the Empress, who wouldn't believe ill of Rasputin, asked that he be ordained; again and again the Holy Synod forbade his ordination. He was even refused the place of a lay-brother. However much he may have wanted to be, he never pretended to be a monk. He was a village pow-wow man, but he knew how to hypnotize and he possessed a power of advertisement equal to his ambition.

"Did he have affairs of the heart? Yes, when they helped or did not interfere. He could have had plenty. His fame as a sort of magician naturally made all women fear him; his physical ugliness naturally made many of them love him."

Serge himself is handsome, but not popular with the ladies.

• • • •

"Yet I know from my own dealings with Rasputin that the only thing he really wanted was power. We tried often to bribe him with other sorts of bids; we always failed.

"He got his power through the Empress' master-passion. But what was that? It was notorious: Loving her husband as she did, she would have sacrificed even him for the health and imperial future of her son, and her one son—all the world is aware—was a sufferer from that perilous disease haemophilia. Why the regular physicians wouldn't do what Rasputin did, none of us could conjecture. Anyhow, he did hypnotize the czarevitch; the hypnosis lowered heart-action; that, I am told, slowed the blood-flow—and this gave the poor blood a better chance to coagulate.

"Rasputin saved the Empress' son. Rasputin could have anything he wanted.

"And Rasputin wanted power."

"Was this creature in league with Germany? With some of its emissaries, we believed. But not for money, as money. A philosopher and statesman like Francis Bacon might take common bribes, even if he did not write Shakespeare; Rasputin was more dangerous because if evil could not buy him, neither could good. He would accept money only for his own purposes; the gaining and holding of power for himself, the rescue of the czardom from the liberalism that he thought was tainting the Czar. Surely Youssoupoff is misquoted. Rasputin considered Germany's western enemies the enemies of the autocratic ideal; he planned to force the abdication of Nicholas and crown the Czarevitch with the Empress as regent.

"You see," said naive Serge, "since the Czar was deaf to us, there was one only thing to be done.

• • • •

"But these tabloid tales of the execution," Serge protested—"how silly! They say the cyanide the doctor injected into those cakes was kept too long, lost its strength. The doctor lost his nerve. He injected water.

"Yet," Serge reflectively concluded, "it did take Rasputin a long time to die . . ."

• • • •

"I suppose," an enthusiastic American once admitted to the sister of one of those executioners, "it simply had to be done."

"Well," she replied—in exile, poor, her life in ruins, in ruins the whole civilization those executioners sought to save—"it doesn't seem to have helped much, does it?"

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THIS is in pursuance of yesterday's great melodrama. You will recall that Mr. Industry, Mr. Labor and Miss Consumer came here for Crack-Down Johnson's N R A convention, according to the hotel men the largest convention we have had since the Shriners came many years ago.

BARGERON.

Well, Miss Consumer went to lunch with Mr. Industry and Mr. Labor and they got to drinking cocktails. The cocktails, as untempered cocktails will, led to a party and when we left our heroes Thursday night they were all singing Sweet Adeline. It develops that this isn't a circumstance to the way they carried on afterward. They came to acting just like visiting firemen. From one night club to another they went, Miss Consumer coming, as the evening wore on, to beam like a lighthouse under the attentions she was receiving from her two escorts. They turned out to be two regular Don Juans when they got started. Each must have had about three years of love stored up in him.

• • • •

As our story begins today we find Miss Consumer just waking up. She rubs her eyes once and they won't open. She rubs them again. "This," she observed, "can't be me. It is a ton of bricks."

Slowly she made her way to the mirror. What she saw there startled her. The bloom of her exhilirated youth of the night before had gone. There were lines in her face, she was frowsy, she was bedraggled.

"Oh, why," she asked, "did I ever leave home?"

It was the same old story. Remorse welled in her breast and her head was hung in shame. How could she ever return to her loved ones, to her townspeople? How could she ever look them in the face? Sophistication, cruel, biting sophistication now replaced that look of innocence which used to cause the boys to vie with one another for the privilege of carrying home her books.

• • • •

Then she sought to pull herself together. Her pride came to her support.

"I am acting like a silly little girl," she sought to comfort herself. "After all, I have been out with the two most prominent men at the convention. And they are both crazy about me.

"Ah, I remember Mr. Labor saying if I ever wanted anything to come to him, and Mr. Industry vowing that he would give me a prominent place in the New Deal scheme of things. I believe I shall call Mr. Industry up and ask him how he feels." No sooner thought than done.

• • • •

But the voice she heard at the other end of the telephone carried none of the honeyed admiration of the night before.

"Why, Miss Consumer," it said very coldly, "aren't you acting a little indiscreet? I will see you at the convention and we will be able to discuss all business matters there."

"Business, business!" She thought she would scream. She who had been led to the Olympia of romance the night before, through glittering lights and sparkling wine. "Oh, oh, the brute," she exclaimed, burying her face in her hands. But ah, there was Mr. Labor, he was more understanding, not so polished and suave, but a man who had suffered and knew life. He had said as much.

• • • •

A few minutes later Mr. Industry responded to another telephone call. This time it was the frantic voice of Mr. Labor.

"Say, old man, you've got to get me out of this. That girl we had out last night—she's just called me up and she's crying and carrying on."

"Me, get you out? Now, now, my dear man. It was you who talked so much to her. She's your girl, not mine."

"Listen, big boy," responded the excited Mr. Labor, "don't try to pull that one me. It was you who started this mess. You are used to it, you can get out of it. Tell your family she was an out-of-town buyer. You can't get by with that. I can't."

And all the while our little girl, Miss Consumer, was sobbing as if her heart would break. "The woman always pays," she cried.

After being an official court reporter, an editor, a lawyer, he branched off into politics which brought him to the House from 1911 to 1925. Now helps Democratic Leader Joe Robinson lead the Senate, and is the chief liaison with the White House. Either this responsibility or a Byrnes-for-President-in-1940 boomlet has lately made him sphinx-like, but he remains one of the keenest, best liked of the New Dealers.

Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My Dear Louise: I suppose you must follow the styles, no matter where they lead, but you needn't go all the way.

A few years ago the whole feminine world seemed to be wearing knee-length skirts, dancing the Charleston and making a show of gaudy bloomers. The ordinary girl, knowing she looked vulgar and ridiculous, still lacked the courage to ignore the example of the crowd.

But there were many gentlewomen, young and old, who refused to violate good taste, style or no style. They shortened their skirts, but not to the height of absurdity. And they had no shame to forget when good taste came back—as it always does.

The froth and spume of storm-tossed waves are always on the surface. Beneath this temporary uproar the ocean remains forever calm and undisturbed.

Good taste is like that. The things that are vulgar and loud and ugly make a great disturbance on the surface now and then, but they soon disappear and are forgotten, and then good taste calmly reigns again.

Styles in manners and morals come and go like styles in dress, and this truth is the point at which I am driving.

There are certain ways of behavior—certain ideals and standards of conduct—that are intrinsically and everlastingly right. Kindness and honor, for example, are elements of decency as fixed as the law of gravity.

These certain right ways are ways of good taste, and no matter how popular or fashionable other ways may be for a day or a year, the world always comes back to eternal rightness.

Of late years it seems to be the fashion for girls to affect, in the name of frankness, some of the faults that are commonly considered masculine.

It isn't the first time. Women swore like troopers in the time of Elizabeth.

But the qualities of fine womanhood, and the qualities that men adore, still include poise and sweetness and gentleness and goodness and faithfulness, and a girl who deserts these qualities to make herself "popular" must at last return to them again—if she can.

A blaze of profane temper may prove a girl modern and free, but it makes her seem common and vulgar to men—no mattter how modern they may be. Love, DAD.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

IRVIN COBB, who hails from Paducah, Ky., and really enjoys getting in and out of his automobile, once braved the sentimentality of the Anglo-Saxon race to say a few plain words about one of its favorite heroines. He was referring to the girl of the old song:

"Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?
Sweet Alice with hair so brown;
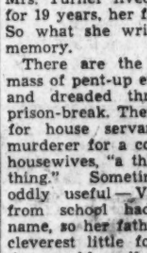
And wept when you gave her a frown."

"Imagine it!" growled Mr. Cobb, or words to that effect. "Either shouts of laughter or the water works! How pleasant to have around the house!"

• • • •

I feel much the same way toward the heroine of Ethel Turner's "One Way Ticket" (Smith & Haas, $2).

Veronica Bourn is going on 18. She lives with her family at San Quentin Prison, San Francisco Bay, where her father is captain of the guard. As her German professor at school tells her to her face, she has a "gift for ecstasy and pain." Well, she certainly has.



ETHEL TURNER

I'll let one example do for a round dozen. Veronica is thinking of her friend Willa, who has been dropping eyelids at a convict in the prison band. "And even if what she had done weren't disgusting, it was so ridiculous—casting sheep's eyes at a man who is locked in a cell at 5 every weekday and 3 o'clock on Sundays! Ogling a man who has been shaved and bertilloned and photographed front and side, and de-loused, maybe, and given a number to wear for 15 years! It was so fiendishly ridiculous! Veronica started to laugh. She laughed until the tears flooded her eyes." Veronica was like that.

But then—I never had an adolescent daughter, and I never lived on a prison reservation.

• • • •

Yet this novel, for all its hysteria and chop-choppy style, which is supposed to be art these days, makes the life around a prison as convincing as you could ask for. Mrs. Turner lived at San Quentin for 19 years, her father an employe. So what she writes is as true as memory.

There are the 4,000 convicts, a mass of pent-up emotion, a constant and dreaded threat of riot and prison-break. There are the trusties for house servants—"Give me a murderer for a cook," say the good housewives, "a thief will steal anything." Sometimes a convict is oddly useful—Veronica's diploma from school had misspelled her name, so her father takes it to "the cleverest little forger in America; they could spell your name backwards and he'd make it right." And there are hangings and suicides and escapes, all just across from a snug, dull, monotonous, eminently respectful life. With such a paradox of blood versus bourgeoise, it is small wonder we come upon hysteria.

• • • •

Mrs. Turner puts up her theme as plain as a sign-post. The "one iron-clad law of the village, whereby it preserved its very life," is to avoid all "equal footing with a convict." Reverse it for the unspeakable crime—"any one here in this town who aids and abets a prisoner to break out of the corral is a public enemy."

Well, you've guessed it. Veronica falls in love with a prisoner, and helps him to escape. What happens then is so tense you'll wish you weren't reading the tale, but you won't put it down. You'll read to the enigmatic yet satisfying end. "One Way Ticket," for all its being a first novel, is almost embarrassingly moving.

Perhaps that is why I wish Veronica, and Mrs. Turner also, hadn't gone quite so Alice Ben Bolt over the matter.

In the Margin.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. has been denied the privilege of filming in China Pearl Buck's novel, "The Good Earth." According to a United Press dispatch, the Nanking government intimated that the story, portraying the primitive customs of uneducated Chinese, was prejudical to the dignity of the Chinese.

"As a cure for jumpy nerves, business worries and all that, try a trip to Merida," says Leonidas W. Ramsey in "Time Out for Adventure: Let's Go to Mexico" (Doubleday Doran).

Instead of jumping from an apartment window, I suggest as a better way out at least a week on a bench in the shaded plazas of Merida. This seat should be just across from an open cantina and within sound of rustling Mayan skirts.

"Or try the cantina in a corner of the Grand Hotel—one of the most engaging spots on this man-made earth. Just outside the open door is the Parque Hidalgo. The floor is of cool red tile, the tables marble-topped and at one end is an old Spanish bar, the shelves stacked with the choicest liquor.

"And the appetizers! There are 'tamales' wrapped in banana leaves; 'chicharron,' or fried pork skin, a sort of Mayan pretzel; pickled oysters; Spanish sausage; 'butifarra,' a sausage made in Catalonia; hard-boiled eggs laid in a pan of pink sour jelly; boiled ham baked in wine; 'tacos relleno negro,' or dark forcemeat, in a crisp tertilla; 'mero,' a small crisply fried fish; an indescribable jellied loaf of 'venado,' or venison strips; small square sandwiches, 'muy picante'; very palatable shredded lobster; Holland cheese and a pile of assorted vegetables and fruits. As the men of the town in white linen suits hang over the bar or talk over the cool table tops, a portly old woman, dark and wrinkled, walks among them smoking a cigarette and selling lottery tickets."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

A TALE OF TWO NORTHERN WINTERS.

(Or "When the Blizzard of 1888 Veteran Meets the Veteran of 1934.")

"I tell you the blizzard of '88 was the worst the country ever saw."

"Baloney! The blizzard of '88 lasted only three days. The blizzard of 1934 lasted all winter!"

"Why, in '88 we had drifts 20 feet high in the main streets."

"Phooey! I've had a drift 20 feet high on both shoulders twice in the last two weeks. Your '88 blizzard was just a small-time disturbance."

"It was 10 days before railroads were operating normally again."

"That's nothing. We don't expect all the trains out of the drifts for another six months."

• • • •

"Why, back in 1888 it snowed so hard, people were buried in drifts before they could get from their offices to their homes."

"In 1934 it snowed so often, people were caught in drifts before they could ascertain which way they were going, to their offices from their homes, or to their homes from their offices."

"Why, I remember the snow in front of the old Astor House was up to the second story."

"A mere snow pile in miniature! At least three times in the last two weeks the snow drifts were on the level with the Empire State Building roof. I slid from the observation tower into the Herald Square subway station on my boy's sled. It was great fun."

"You don't know what a blizzard is. Why, on the second day of the storm in March, 1888, nobody was able to move except the snow shovelers."

"That's nothing. We have snow shovelers in New York who haven't moved all winter."

• • • •

"It took Jim Fiske 18 hours to drive from City Hall to the old Broadway Central Hotel in a pung drawn by four horses, and when he got there three of the horses were missing. They were found 10 days later in Elizabeth, N. J., where they had been blown by the gale."

"It took Fiorella LaGuardia five days to get from the waiters' strike to the quarter slot-machine campaign, using a streamline sled, and when he got there he found he was really caught in an ice floe in Albany where he had been blown by the force of his own exertions. Boy, this has been a winter!"

• • • •

"Dont' make me laugh. In 1888 they found a horse car buried in the snow at Broadway and Fourteenth street after two weeks!"

"Bah! There must be 10 or 12 railroad trains that haven't been dug up on the Long Island road yet."

"Lissen, 46 years ago conditions were such that no business was transacted in the city for a full week."

"Conditions have been such that no business has been transacted in the city for the last five years, but we don't blame it all on the weather."

"In '88 the telegraph wires were down for weeks and all communication was cut off."

"We had three messenger boys blown inside out by the winds this winter, and twice this season when I got a telegram it was so cold I had to get a plumber to open it."

"In 1888 we were days without food or coal."

IMPERIAL UPS AND DOWNS.

Henry Pu-Yi, 29 years old, when he became Emperor of Manchukuo the other day, ascended a throne for the third time in his life. It must seem a little like getting in and out of the rumble seat.

Well, just when people had definitely abandoned the idea that anything could stop an automobile from being an all-year-around vehicle, we got the winter of 1934.

Militarism in America

Dr. Charles Wesley Reviews Warrior's Influence on Nation's Political History in Eleventh Article of The Post's Scholarship Series.

To encourage intelligent study of today's history-making events, The Washington Post and four great local centers of learning—American, Georgetown and Howard Universities, and the Catholic University of America—are cooperating in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, which calls for preliminary essays by high school seniors on Governmental topics, and which carries major awards of five four-year tuition scholarships at the sponsoring universities.

For the benefit of the hundreds of students already enrolled in this competition, The Post is publishing a series of articles, of which the following is the eleventh, contributed by professors at these four universities.

Dr. Charles H. Wesley, professor of history, Howard University, offers the fourth group in this series concerning the pros and cons of some of the stipulated topics on civic problems.

Military leadership has been of direct influence in American history. Its significance has been often underestimated. When the leading personages of the past are listed one may be surprised when his attention is called to the leadership in public life undertaken by military heroes. Whatever one's present opinion may be upon war and its undesirability, or of pacifism and its desirability, the student will be interested in noting the influence of militarism and its leaders in our history.

The reader of American history will see an America of vast empires which were to be conquered; an America in its youth struggling for existence against older powers whose defenses were sure; an America pushing its frontiers toward the West with a ruthlessness which could justify itself only in the acquisition of land and mineral wealth; an America which must develop and army and navy in order to insure protection to its manufactures, its bankers and its industrialists. Even if one should be an advocate of peace, he can not close his eyes to the influence of militarism on the history of the United States.

Two Opposing Views.

Perhaps he may find this influence has been, from his point of view, a baneful one and that the Nation might have been more capably led if it had more of the leadership of the statesmen and less of the leadership of military types. This is a view which can be presented and has the ear-marks of a critical approach to the subject. The study can be approached then from the point of view of the might-have-beens of history.

The historical facts, however, seem to show that military leaders have directly influenced our history. We need only to call a few of the outstanding names: George Washington, Andrew Jackson, William Henry Harrison, Winfield Scott, Zachary Taylor, Samuel Houston, John C. Freemont, U. S. Grant, Robert E. Lee, Sherman, Stonewall Jackson, Sheridan, Joseph E. Johnston, Dewey, Theodore Roosevelt, John J. Pershing. Other names in public life spring instantly to one's mind as these names are called.

One of the difficulties which arises is, what were the motives of these military leaders? Were they patriotic men or self-seekers or bloodthirsty warriors, or accidental heroes? Did they have a mixture of good and bad qualities? Were men bad because they fought for an unworthy cause, or because they were fighting for a principle with which we of today disagree?

Merits Hinge on Moitves.

Motives are difficult to discover. One's intimate friends and biographers may not know them. And yet the relations of some men to their time is indisputable. The writer who is searching for historical truth will find that those who have been regarded as bad leaders by some, may have some good in them, especially after peace has come and we think with sober reflections.

Selected readings: "True Stories of Great Americans," bigraphies to be found through library catalogues; Lodge and Roosevelt, "Hero Tales From American History;" Southworth, "Builders of Our Country;" Sparks, "Men Who Made the Nation;" Tappan, "American Hero Tales;" Jamies G. Wlson, "Great Commanders;" R. M. Johnston, "Leading American Soldiers;" Molly E. Seawell, "Twelve Great Naval Captains;" William Wood, "Captains of the Civil War;" Frederick L. Huidekoper, "Military Unpreparedness of the United States," "A History of American Land Forces From Colonial Times Until 1915;" Gordy, "American Leaders and Heroes."

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial high school within the following area: The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged the best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments or inquiries promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

"The Wreck of the Grosvenor."

Clark Russell, who wrote this novel, was an Englishman who happened to be born in New York. He wrote many excellent tales of the sea, of which the best is "The Wreck of the Grosvenor."

I read it as a small boy, and I have never forgotten some of the incidents and the characters. The normal boy adores men who are physically strong; hence I had a sneaking admiration for the bucko mate, Mr. Dowling, because the mighty muscles of his arms made big bulges in his coat sleeves. He was a holy terror: brutal, coarse, but fearless. He had no fear of God or Satan or man. The mutineers had a hard time killing him; he put up a terrific fight, but they were so many, they got him at last. I was rather sorry, though he deserved to die.

The early chapters of this novel are full of the flavor of the sea; and I suppose of all the works of man, there is hardly anything more beautiful than a full-rigged ship in motion. These descriptions have the real deep-water style; every reader is a passenger.

And after the mutiny, and the loss of the ship, the hardships of the men on the raft, especially their sufferings from thirst, are still vivid in my memory. And finally, when one of them, almost insane from thirst, leaps into the sea, and begins to drink from it, his amazement when he finds that the water is fresh! For they are out of sight of land.

It seems like a miracle, when one of them remembers and shouts, "It is the Amazon!" The mouths of most rivers are salt; and for many miles up most rivers, the tide is stronger than the current; but the mighty Amazon, with a mouth 150 miles wide, pours such billions of tons of fresh water into the sea that the ocean is fresh even though the land is invisible.

I have often wondered, in Noah's Flood, whether the abundance of rain made the ocean fresh, or whether the sea turned the falling water salt. This question has troubled me a great deal.

Ford May Move School Of Edison's Mother

Vienna, Ontario, March 2 (AP). The school in which Nancy Elliott, mother of Thomas A. Edison, taught here years ago, may join other relics of the Edison family in the Henry Ford Museum at Dearborn, Mich., it was reported here today.

The building now belongs to Ford. An old house in which Edison's grandfather lived has already been removed to the Ford museum.

In addition to his work with the University of Virginia and the institute of Public affairs, Dr. Maphis has long been a leader in movements toward liberalizing education within the State.

Radio Waves and Ripples

HURDY GURDY note:
A lady heard Arthur Godfrey asking people to send in their old hurdy gurdies so WJSV's Song Vendor wouldn't sound so much like the Street Singer and could be put on the network. She told her next-door neighbor, who went right up into the attic and pulled one out. It seems it belonged to a past she was trying to forget, and she has been wanting to get rid of it quietly for some time.
The Song Vendor starts on the network next Friday with the lady's hurdy gurdy.

BIOGRAPHICAL note:
All the boys in Rudy Schramm's band were sitting around the other night listening to Edwin C. Hill tell about Custer's last fight when Harold Custer, who every one supposed was just another bass-fiddler, leapt up to proclaim that he was Gen. Custer's grandnephew. Harold probably had almost forgotten about it.

Columbia's statistics department should make a careful recheck of its Presidential broadcast figures. A National press release yesterday said the President had used its network 26 times since March 4. Columbia was able to count only 25. That puts the White House in the embarrassing position of showing N. B. C. a slight favoritism. There's been a mistake somewhere.
Whatever the real total is, 25 or 26, President Roosevelt still holds an all-time record for White House broadcasting. He was beaten right in his own Cabinet, however, by Secretary Wallace, who scored 28 (N. B. C. count).

N. B. C. is furnishing the entertainment for the White House Correspondents' Association dinner to the President tonight for the third time. It has put its own chief program director, Vice President John F. Royal in charge. A National press release says RCA President David Saranoff and N. B. C. President M. H. Aylesworth will be among the honor guests, but we'll bet a dollar Columbia's president, Mr. Paley, will be there, too.

National is broadcasting from sessions of the Continental Congress, an alliance of Socialist groups which is supposed to be sending some 5,000 delegates to the Capital today and tomorrow.
The luncheon of the committee on correspondence and action today at the Arlington Hotel—when the general subject will be "Will the Financial Policy of the Federal Government Solve Our National Problems?"—will be broadcast from 1 to 1:45 p. m.
"Scarcity Versus Abundance—a Challenge to Americans" will be tomorrow's subject to be broadcast from 10 to 10:30 a. m. Norman Thomas, Broadus Mitchell and Emil Rive will be the speakers.

Eddie Cantor will be assisted on his show tomorrow night by Lillian Roth, one of the better movie and vaudeville singers. They're both vacationing in Florida. James Wallington and Rubinoff will work the show from New York.

National has built a new guest-artist show with Ray Perkins, Gale Page and Harold Stokes' orchestra as fixtures and Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan Opera Co. mezzo-soprano, as the first guest. It opens Tuesday on the "red" at 10 p. m.

Richard Walton Tully's "The Bird of Paradise" will be revived on N. B. C. from 8 to 9 tonight. Laurette Taylor, Theodore Roberts, Guy Bates Post and Lewis Stone in the cast, the original production ran 112 Broadway performances without stopping in 1912.

Virginia House Votes Million In School Tax

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, March 2.—New taxes to provide $1,000,000 a year additional for schools were voted today by the House delegates, 74 to 15.

Administration critics were routed. All of the numerous amendments offered by opposition forces were killed. In its final form the measure called for imposition of $1,244,000 in additional taxes, $500,000 of the total recommended by former Gov. Pollard and the remainder by Gov. Peery. The proposal now goes to the Senate.

Outstanding clauses contemplated tightening of income and inheritance tax exemptions, a new scale of merchant taxes and additional levies on gross receipts of public utility corporations.

Income tax exemptions for married persons were reduced from $2,800 to $2,000, and those for single persons from $1,250 to $1,000. Allowances for dependents were cut from $400 to $200 each.

Rhodes Defends Bill.

Delegate John Q. Rhodes, Louisa, a co-author of the tax bill with Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, told the House passage would mean the State guaranteed an eight-month minimum school term.

"There has been a great amount of misrepresentation about this tax bill," Mr. Rhodes charged. "There won't be any additional tax on farmers as has been claimed. The cities will pay 95 per cent of the increase."

The Louisa Delegate explained the State's funds would be distributed on the basis of actual school attendance in counties and cities, rather than according to the condition of local treasuries.

Mr. Rhodes contended "many teachers may have to work for nothing as they did last year," unless the measure received a majority.

Delegate J. T. Coleman, jr., Livingston, sought to prevent reduction of the income-tax exemption for dependents from $400 to $200. His amendment was rejected by 51 to 35.

$475 Per Teacher.

Under the method of distribution adopted, the State guarantees $475 per teacher, and distributes the fund to the localities on the basis of the number of teachers needed for groups of 25 to 40 pupils in average daily attendance, according to the density of school population.

Under amendments offered by Wilbur C. Hall, and incorporated in the bill by the House, increases in the income, inheritance and utility taxes were made effective for three years only. Other taxes were made permanent.

The roll call showed 15 members voting in opposition to the bill and 11 either absent or refraining from voting.

Estimates of Totals.

Revenue it proposes follows:

Individual income tax increase, $260,000; inheritance tax increase, $110,000; merchants' license tax increase, $220,000; increase in gross receipts tax on heat, light and power companies, $535,000; tax increase on city buses, $30,000; tax on pipe lines, $24,000; tax on sleeping cars, $22,000; tax on telephone companies, $22,000.

Stanley, of Henry, secured adoption of an amendment which would limit the appropriation to the amount of revenue raised, should it be below $1,000,000, but fixing the maximum for schools at $1,000,000.

Delegate I. E. S. Stephens, Smithfield, lost in a move to make mandatory tax reductions by the localities, on account of the additional funds to be received from the State.

The Senate passed a new charter bill for Staunton and a score of other local measures.

Roanoke Firemen Build Own Engine

Saving of $3,500 Made on New Equipment.

Roanoke, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Roanoke firemen have built a pumping engine themselves and placed it in service following exhaustive pumping tests.

The engine carries the same kind of equipment as the other engines of the department. A motor-driven pump will deliver 550 gallons of water per minute.

All steel and woodwork construction was done by members of the local department at a cost of about $1,600. Chief W. M. Mullins said that the engine ordinarily would have cost $5,000. The engine is to be used as emergency apparatus.

Term Lacks Liquor Cases; Woman Driver Jailed.

Danville, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—The semiannual term of Federal court is over, with four men in jail awaiting removal to the Atlanta Penitentiary. Otha Owen was given three years for misappropriation of postoffice funds. Howard Jones, who passed counterfeit money, was given one year and a day. Raymond Henry and Charles Smith, of Texas, got three years for stealing an automobile in Philadelphia and taking it to Pearisburg.

Mrs. Ora Lee Smith is in jail here on charges of hit-and-run and assault on Police Officer W. A. Newell.

Sailor Bares Murder

Enlisted Man Reports Killing Man Who Stole Car, but Search of River Fails to Locate Body; Victim's Neck Declared Broken.

Norfolk, Va., March 2 (AP).—A charge of murdering "an unknown person" was filed against an enlisted man at the Naval Air Station, giving the name of Vernsen Charles Chambers, 30, of Birmingham, Ala., who today went to a police station and asserted:

"I've just killed a man—broke his neck and threw him overboard."

Officers, who searched the river for the body, which they quoted Chambers as saying he last saw floating away from the dock, said the sailor told them he came out of a beer parlor last night to find his car missing and later located it on a narrow street near the waterfront.

A man was getting out, the story ran, and when asked what he was doing with the car, he started fighting.

"I watched my chance and threw a half-nelson on him," the sailor said. "I bent his neck and head back. Finally I heard his neck crack. Then I spun him around five or six times, and he went over the edge of the dock into the river."

After watching the body float away, Chambers said he returned to the beer parlor and consulted a friend, who advised him to report to police. He said the killing, which he said was unintentional, resulted from an effort to protect himself. The unknown victim was described as about 23, with long blond hair.

Governor Cites Need of Action In West Virginia

Crisis Demands Immediate Fiscal Relief, He Warns; Tax Bills Pushed.

Charleston, W. Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Following a conference in which Gov. H. G. Kump told legislative leaders that State fiscal affairs are at a serious crisis, and that new revenue must be raised without further delay, bills were introduced today in both houses of the Legislature designed to carry out his tax recommendations.

"We had what we thought was an understanding with the Federal Government for emergency funds to meet relief through extension of credit until the Legislature acts," the Governor told the leaders. "That has been cut off. Relief cannot be halted in the rigors of winter. Immediate action is required in West Virginia if we are to avoid events here that will be humiliating to us as citizens of a great State."

The Governor again outlined his plans for raising $10,000,000, of which $3,000,000 would be for relief, from a consumers' sales tax, a luxury tax, and increased rates upon corporations.

Both Houses Active.

Meanwhile, by passing a group of bills authorizing transfer of the funds, the Legislature today arranged for immediate use of $250,000 of State road funds for emergency relief.

A Senate sub-committee drafted a consumers' sales tax bill of its own, calling for a 3 per cent rate without exemptions. It also provides for a 20 per cent increase in rates on utilities and other corporations. It imposes no special taxes on luxuries, which are included in the sales tax. Senator Louis A. Henderson (Democrat), Dodd Ridge, predicted passage of this measure by the Senate.

The House of Delegates cut through red tape after receiving the Governor's bills from Delegate Wilbert H. Norton (Democrat), Cabell, made them a special order of business for tomorow. The House has pending the tax program of Speaker Ralph M. Hiner (Democrat), Pendleton, calling for depletion taxes on oil and gas, franchise taxes on corporations, and an increase of 1 cent a gallon on the State gasoline tax to 5 cents.

Kump Asks Surtaxes.

The Kump bills call for a surtax on most types of business, including utilities and corporations, increasing present rates approximately 60 per cent, to raise $4,000,000; a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax with foodstuffs and professional services exempted to raise $3,500,000, and a luxury tax of 20 per cent on tobacco, cigarets, bottled drinks and candy, and of 2 to 3 cents on amusement tickets to raise $2,500,000.

Retailers, banking groups, water companies and telephone companies would be exempted from the surtaxes.

By a vote of 16 to 8 the Senate voted down a proposal to discharge the joint CWA investigating committee without permitting it to make a report.

Both houses terminated the county farm agent controversy by approving a conference report for payment of salaries out of Federal and State funds.

CWA Project to Cover 300 Sample Counties Over United States.

The farm housing survey, a CWA project carried out by the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Agricultural Extension Services, has just made its preliminary report on 2,540 farmhouses in Fauquier County, Va.

The object of this report is to provide basic information for a program of improvement for farm homes, 300 counties throughout the country being covered by the survey committee, and such major problems as exterior and interior condition of homes, water supply, and sewage disposal, light and heat facilities and refrigeration and laundry methods, being covered by investigators.

During 1929 in Fauquier County there were 1,981 farms and the total farm population was 12,473.

Complete replacement for the foundations of 301 farms was made since that time, and 823 received repairs; 105 new chimneys were built and 472 were repaired. New roofs in 215 homes were constructed and 719 mended.

As storage space for fruits and vegetables, 221 additional rooms were needed, while present storage rooms numbered 777. Only 245 work rooms were in use at present, with 61 badly needed. There were 1,568 back porches in county farms and 175 more listed as necessary. Only 360 bathrooms have been installed in homes, while 160 more are needed.

On 2,030 Fauquier farms, water is carried by hand, 70 use hand pumps, and hot water facilities are to be found in only 280 homes.

Kerosene or gasoline lights lead electricity in farm houses by the total of 2,184 to 324. There is central heating in but 142 homes, while stoves heat 2,397 farms. For refrigeration purposes, 1,044 have iceboxes, but only 85 mechanical refrigerators. But for laundry work, 266 farm wives have power washing machines to 99 who still use hand laundry machines.

In answer to the survey question, "If you had $500 to spend in improvng your farm, what would you use it for?" 31.3 per cent of Fauquier farmers stated that they would use it in improving the interiors of their homes.

Charles Town, W. Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Protection of five homes is the task undertaken by Collie, a dog of collie breed, which has appropriated several families as his masters, and divides his time among them as the spirit moves him.

Collie's ownership is claimed by no one, but he has access to various hearths. He is sometimes known as "Buster." The dog seems to have a likeness for children, for there are youngsters at all of his stopping places but one.

His age and origin are unknown. He came to Charles Town a year ago, and has been established here ever since.

Blaze Menaces Old Documents

Washington Relics Escape in Courthouse Fire at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Ancient documents were endangered last night by a fire which swept the south wing of the Fredericksburg courthouse and caused a $2,000 loss.

Priceless records, including the original will of Mary, mother of George Washington, and the original commission of Augustine Washington, his father, as one of the trustees of Fredericksburg, said to be the only record in existence with reference to Washington's father, were endangered.

A policeman discovered the flames at 9:30 p. m. The fire apparently started in the room being used as headquarters of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. The flames were soon extinguished after hose was manned from the adjoining fire house.

The courthouse building is insured for $14,000, although the American Legion equipment, including flags and many pictures and relics of the World War, which suffered $1,000 damage, was not insured.

RYE—an old American Family

Your first sip of SHENANDOAH will convince you that it is possible now to get dependable quality and purity in blended Rye whiskey at a price which the average man can pay

Back through the generations, the name of SPRING GARDEN has been known and highly cherished among Rye whiskies. And now its fine flavor and quality come to you in a rich blend eminently worth its price

RED TOP is a name you can trust when you buy Rye whiskey. It stands for quality which only aging can give to whiskey, and purity maintained by the most skilful blending

Always ask to see the bottle and look for the National Distillers emblem. It signifies that the whiskey on which it appears has its quality and purity safeguarded from the distillery to you by one watchful ownership

A RYE WHISKEY that has been properly distilled and aged and blended is an aristocrat among liquors. It is as easy to the throat as four-ply velvet. One does not have to gulp to get it down. It can be sipped with full enjoyment. A distinguished rye whiskey signals its maturity before it reaches the lips. It clings to the side of the glass and "beads." It is an American institution.

The guide to the selection of America's purest blends of choicest rye is the seal of National Distillers and the Penn-Maryland signature which appear on the label of every bottle of our distillation.

New Cults Divide Religion

Period Since War Has Produced Ever-Increasing Diffusion of Thought Which Turns Church Back to Christ's Teachings for Unity.

By William T. Ellis.

Ever since the war, even amidst our carnival of materialism, we have had a wild spree of religious speculation. Physical scientists led, with their attempts to give us a Deity by definition. They named God as the Primal Force, the all-pervading Essence, the Cosmic Principle, the Great Mathematician and the impersonal First Cause.

At the opposite extreme, all sorts of misguided persons, many of them charlatans, set about offering new religions and new cults, usually with esoteric and exotic trappings, to attract the ignorant. Every great city has dozens of these groups, supported mostly by silly women.

Among Christians there has been an amazing tendency to run into narrow specialties and speculations. Thus we have had fighting Fundamentalists, fanatical and fuming like followers of the Mad Mullah. Opposed to them have been the wordy and mind-worshiping Modernists, with a vague and sterile creed of denial, showing themselves to be as intolerant in the name of "liberalism" as any narrow sectarian. Fewer in number, but making up in vociferousness what they lack in strength, have been the prophetical crowd, who can make the Old Testament mean whatever they want; the Pyramidists, who seem to see more significance in the Great Pyramid of Egypt than in the plain teachings of the New Testament; the Millennialists, who disregard Christ's plain teaching that of the time of His return no man knows anything; the numerologists, a crazy crew, who find more significance in certain arbitrary numbers in the Bible than they do in its plain text; the gymnastic "tonguers," who profess to speak in unknown tongues; the "second blessing" folk, who are not always a blessing to their families and neighbors; the devotees of ecclesiastical millinery; and so on through a long and incredible category. There must be somthing tremendously vital in Christianity to survive this assortment of Christian vagaries.

Christ's Creed Distorted.

All of this spectacle is enough to make the angels weep, when they view it against the background of humanity's present plight. But still another grave complication enters in the vogue of the appeal to Jesus by almost every reformer, radical, "intellectual" or other claimant for the public's ear.

It is a rare book on sociology that does not quote Jesus as authority for its favorite positions, whatever they may be. Most of these claims to Christ as their teacher, leader and authority are entirely unsupported by the New Testament record. Jesus would never recognize Himself in the roles in which it is the contemporary fashion to cast Him.

What is the answer to the conditions cited? Simply this: The New Testament record of the life, acts and words of Jesus Christ is the only basis we have for a knowledge of Him and His mind. The narrative is wondrously clear and simple and explicit. Most of the motives and characteristics which contemporary "psychological" biographies attribute to Him are simple buncombe; these word-magicians take out of the hat only the rabbits they first put in. Any honest person, with ordinary intelligence, by reading the four Gospels, can learn enough about Jesus Christ to shape his character, guide his conduct and save his soul. This present Sunday school lesson makes clear what Jesus thought of Himself.

The Answer to Doubters.

There is a sense, of course, wherein Jesus, the God-Man, baffles human comprehension. But His own method of answering questions was not to offer a profound discourse on theology, but simply to appeal to the clear facts of record.

John the Baptist had been cast into prison by a corrupt King, because of his boldness as a preacher of righteousness. His high hour had been when he had baptized Jesus in the Jordan. But in his dungeon depression and loneliness he had been assailed by doubts; as is the experience of every sensitive soul. A day in the sunshine would have cured him. Many a man is sitting home amidst his books, morbid and fearful, when he ought to be out fishing or skating or playing golf. Spiritual depression is often nothing more or less than lack of fresh air, exercise and good food. It was John, the prisoner, who sent to Christ to ask if He really were the Messiah.

How did Jesus reply? He bade the messengers return and tell John the things they had seen and heard —the incontrovertible and uncomplicated facts: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have good tidings preached unto them." Thus did Jesus exemplify His own teaching, "By their fruits shall ye know them."

In passing, it may be remarked that this is still the testimony of real Christianity. A holy life, faithful in deeds of helpfulness and neighborliness, continues to be the best of all Christian evidences.

Criticism at a Discount.

Devotees of fine-spun speculation may waste hours on this Lesson in pointing out the criticisms hurled at Jesus. Of course, He was criticized. Everybody who is anybody is criticized. He may take his own measure by the degree of attention that he gives to the critics. How runs the old Scotch comment?

"They say?
What do they say?
Let them say!"

Write it down as one of life's sure things that the person who is going to govern his life by the opinion of his neighbors is in for an unhappy time. "A decent respect for the opinion of mankind"—as a certain famous old document phrases it—is one thing; but to live in terror of every opinion by anybody is quite another. Jesus showed the absurdity and inconsistency of public opinion by recalling how John's asceticism caused him to be accused of demon-possession; whereas when the Son of Man came eating and drinking, they said "Behold, a gluttonous man and winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." There are multitudes of self-righteous separatists today who do not relish the fact that Jesus was a genial soul, a good comrade to all sorts of people. Thomas Curtis Clarke once wrote a few lines that are pertinent:

"Who would a true saint be?
Let him live joyously
And not too soberly,
As if of saint's degree;
The world's best saint is he
Who makes good company."

Faith Above Intellect.

What Charles Lamb called "imperfect sympathy" existed between Jesus and the highborws and aristocrats of His day. He even said, in our Lesson passage, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes." Simple faith understands Christ more clearly than intellectual pride. A plain, Bible-studying Christian may know more about God than the scientist who looks for Him with a microscope and a telescope.

Let us hope that the deep-flowing religious tides of our time may not be diverted by any of the extraneous cults and theories, such as are indicated in the beginning of this article. What hungry-hearted humanity desperately needs now is a clear conception of the Christ who represented God as a loving Father; and whose own sufficient word was "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." To find and follow Jesus is to discover life's real meaning and to receive both peace and power.

Naval Chapel Scene Today For Wedding

Miss Kathryn C. Robinson, Lieut. Lynn Petross to Be Married.

Romance on Trip to Far East Wins Daughter of Senator.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A romance started three years ago on the Orient-bound Navy transport Henderson will culminate in the brilliant wedding this afternoon, in the Naval Academy Chapel, of Miss Kathryn Caroline Robinson, only daughter of Senator and Mrs. Arthur R. Robinson, of Indiana, to Lieut. Lynn Chism Petross, U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Petross, of Springlake, Ark.

News of the wedding came as a complete surprise to Miss Robinson's many friends in the Capital Lieut. Petross, who had only recently returned to Washington from duty in Cuban waters, has received unexpected orders to the West Coast. Because of this the wedding is taking place immediately and no formal invitations have been issued.

The historic old chapel with its chartre-blue stained glass windows and memorial plaques will be beautifully decorated with green ferns, palms and white blossoms. The ceremony will be performed by Chaplain W. H. Thomas, of the Academy.

Senator to Escort Bride.

Senator Robinson will escort his daughter to the altar and give her in marriage. She will wear a gown of heavy white satin, made on simple lines, the long full skirt falling into a graceful fan-shaped train. The brief fitted jacket, with its soft high neckline and long, close-fitting sleeves, has a row of buttons down the back. The small white satin turban has a diminutive brim of white tulle. The bride's bouquet will be of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor and only attendant is Miss Lila Townsend, daughter of Senator John G. Townsend. She will wear a frock of sapphire-blue crepe made with a long flaring skirt and a large collar of white organdie and a small white hat similar to that worn by the bride. Her bouquet will be of spring flowers.

Lieut. Petross will have as his best man Lieut. J. D. Lambrecht, and the ushers are Lieut. Comdr. Norman Roberts, Lieut. Comdr. E. E. Duvall, Lieut. Clinton DeWitt Hamberger aand Lieut J. M. B. R. Armstrong, all of whom will wear the Naval full dress uniform.

Journey to West Coast.

After the ceremony the bridal pair will leave the chapel under the traditional arch of swords. Mrs. Robinson, mother of the bride, will be costumed in spring-blue chiffon with touches of white and a small hat of black velvet. Later Lieut. Petross and his bride will leave for the West Coast. They plan to stop for several brief visits en route before going on to San Diego, where the bridegroom will be stationed on the U. S. S. Phillip.

Mrs. Petross' traveling costume is a three-piece suit of blue and white checks, a small gray felt hat with a perky little feather and gray accessories.

The bride was graduated from De-Pauw University in 1932. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority and was prominent in campus activities.

Lieut. Petross was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1925, and was graduated from the Line Post Graduate School, Annapolis, last year.

Shiny Shoes Royal Badge

Patent Leather Designates Haiti's Queen, Marine King Relates.

Haitian queens do not wear crowns. They wear patent leather shoes which distinguish them from the commoners, Faustus Wirkus, "the White King of La Gonave," revealed this fact in his illustrated lecture on Haiti and Haitian customs at the Congressional Club yesterday afternoon.

"My first acquaintance with Haitian royalty began when I noticed a woman prisoner and inquired about her identity," Mr. Wirkus said. "I was told her name was Ti Memmene, and that she was Queen of La Gonave.

"I conferred with her and found that she had been arrested because she objected to the treatment accorded the natives by the white officials. I arranged for her release, and in gratitude she gave a dance in my honor."

Mr. Wirkus spent four years at La Gonave where he was sent by the Marines as District Commander. At the end of the first two years, he was made King of the island.

"When they first told me they were going to make me a king, I thought it was a joke," he said. "But later I found out they were serious, so I accepted the honor. They used to greet me with rolls and ruffles on their drums whenever I came into one of their villages. Then, if I consented, they would give a dance in my honor."

Mr. Wirkus illustrated his lecture with many entertaining pictures, showing the peculiar customs of the Haitians. One of the most interesting depicted the way the women carry great bales of straw on their heads when they go on a journey. When they get tired they take the straw and make a bed out of it.

Pictures of an annual religious festival showed women in the islands bathing in a sacred waterfall that is supposed to make the gods smile upon them and give them children. Some women become so entranced that they fall in the water and have to be saved from drowning.

"The natives are not too particular about the images they use for gods in their voodoo religion," Mr. Wirkus concluded. "And, since they do not have a picture of their snake god, they use St. Patrick instead, because he has snakes at his feet."

Culbertson on Bridge

Rescuing The Doubler.

Generally speaking, it is not good policy to "rescue" your partner when he has made a Penalty Double, even of a low contract, following an Opening bid by you. The most profitable penalties at the Bridge tables are those which follow low vulnerable Overcalls, so unless an Opening bidder finds in his own hand compelling arguments against permitting a Penalty Double to stand, he should accept his partner's judgment. On the contrary, however, when a player has opened the bidding on a hand that contains two long suits, he is taking a grave risk to permit a partner's Penalty Double of one to stand.

An example of a hand upon which a game was sacrificed and opponents were permitted to make a doubled contract of one is the following:

South Dealer.
East and West vlunerable.

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1♡(1)	1♠(2)
Dbl.(3)	Pass	Pass(4)	Pass

1—The correct Opening bid.

2—A sound Overcall, even though vlunerable. Certainly East need not anticipate any grave disaster.

3—South apparently has three trump tricks and in addition has two Kings. These, with the tricks shown by his partner's Opening bid, seem to indicate a sizable penalty.

4—The freakish nature of North's hand should suggest the wisdom of a further bid. From his holding the penalty does not look worthwhile in view of the fact that a game may be sacrificed.

As a matter of fact, East should have been set one trick and, of course, game in hearts could easily have been made by North. However, East made his doubled contract through a defensive error.

South led the King of hearts, which held, and then a small club, wishing to get North in the lead to lead a trump. North won the second trick and, being void of the trump suit, returned a diamond. East played the Knave, and South won with the King. South now decided that North wished to ruff diamonds and returned the suit. East cashed the Ace, led a heart, which was ruffed in Dummy, and discarded his remaining club on the diamond Queen. He lost altogether three spade tricks and one trick each in hearts, diamonds and clubs, fulfilling his contract.

Ballet Russe Holds Interest Of Socialites

Reservations for Show Tomorrow in Great Demand.

A brisk demand for reservations for the two performances of the internationally famous Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, to be given at the National Theater tomorrow afternoon and evening, indicates the same ardent interest here that New York and Chicago have shown in this spectacular entertainment.

In Chicago, where the opening performance was given as a benefit for the Passavant Hospital, there was such a large crowd that many of the city's most distinguished music patrons were surprised to find themselves unable to find seats except in the top gallery.

Recent additions to the list of box holders include the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, Mrs. Keith Merrill, and Miss Lisa Gardiner.

Other additions to the patrons' list include the Minister of Portugal and Mme. di Bianchi, Dr. Hans Dreyhausen, Dr. and Mrs. James J. Hogan, Mrs. Carter Hall, Mrs. A. W. Hodgkins, Mrs. Hugh Mitchell, Mrs. A. K. Payne, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Mrs. M. S. Perkins, Col. Marco Pennaroli, Maj. and Mrs. F. L. Purdon, Mrs. Charles R. Sanderson, Miss Anita Schade, Mrs. Lyman B. Recovery Program Gives Women Wide Variety of Employment

Jobs Now Held By Gentler Sex In 250 Different Occupations

Mrs. Woodward, Director of Women's Work in FERA and CWA, Tells of Unusual Pursuits Opened Up All Over the United States; Outdoor Toil Has Benefited Many.

By Frances Mangum.

Fifty years ago there was one job for a woman—making a home and rearing children.

Today women are employed in no less than 250 pursuits, ranging from scrubbing tombstones to checking up on divorced husbands.

Yesterday Mrs. Ellen S Woodward, director of women's work of the Federal Emergency Relief and Civil Works Administrations, sat in her office and pointed out on a large map of the United States the extensive areas in which women are working at unusual and constructive jobs.

She spoke of the recent lean years during which millions of women throughout the country were forced to become breadwinners, but in many cases were unable to find employment and earn even a bare sustenance.

She told also of the thousands of highly educated women, specialists in certain constricted fields, who, suddenly losing their jobs, found themselves without any means of support.

"Out of this calamitous state of affairs there has sprung a new order," declared Mrs. Woodward, "a world of women who will work wherever work there is, who will search out jobs, and even create them!

"Naturally the Federal Emergency Relief has not been able to take care of all the unemployed women in our country. It has, however, been able to give steady jobs to an amazing number of those on the relief lists."

Repair of Schoolhouses.

Delving into a stack of communications piled on her desk, Mrs. Woodward sorted out letters from Civil Works administrators in different States naming the projects on which women workers were engaged.

"Down South in many of the rural districts women are repairing run-down school houses, painting them inside and out," she said. "Some of them actually go into the woods, chop down trees, hew posts from them, and build fences around community property. Others are employed in scrubbing tombstones.

"All through the country are small graveyards run down and dismally dilapidated. Rural workers engaged in a thorough clean-up campaign are completely rehabilitating these places.

"In a great many sections of the country they are searching out and finding data on historical places and buildings. They see that such information is catalogued, and the places marked. This in turn gives work to cataloguers and markers.

"The tumble-down boundary posts that mark the State and county lines also come under their supervision. They reconnoiter the countryside, ascertain the location of these, paint and repair them, and thus help preserve them."

Engaged in Road Building.

Mrs. Woodward read aloud a report from the administrator in Alabama showing where women there were actually engaged on road work. They follow in the path of the men who are scraping and digging, and plant grass, shrubs and flowers along the roadside. In a great many States they are at work on planting projects in public parks.

"This out-of-doors work is a fine thing for a great many women who have been too closely confined to their homes," Mrs. Woodward pointed out. "We've had letters from many of them saying that after six or seven weeks of this sort of gardening, they seem to gain a new lease on life."

Mrs. Woodward told of the jobs under Civil Works which many colored women had obtained.

"In North Carolina," she said, "Negro women are at work digging the weeds out of golf courses. Farther South many of them have found employment in draining and cleaning swamps for mosquito control.

Chivalry Practiced.

"We had a letter from the administrator of a Southern State the other day citing instances which prove that chivalry still rules below the Mason and Dixon line. He says that in several districts men have been known to give up their jobs under Civil Works to women who were called upon to support families."

In cities women are employed on a wide variety of Federal relief jobs, according to Mrs. Woodward.

"In some cities" she said, "they are carting away garbage, helping to locate old public records and prepare them for use, surveying vacant lots and back yards, and helping check up on divorced husbands who are not contributing to the support of their children in needy cases."

Regarding the women who have specialized vocations and who are out of work, Mrs. Woodward said that wherever it was possible they were put to work in congenial surroundings.

"I know of one elderly woman in Boston—and she is simply an example of many women all over the United States—who used to teach art," she said. "When she became old and not able to work every day, she lost her pupils and had no means of support.

Art Guide and Taxidermist.

"Through Civil Works she was placed as guide in an art gallery and has been doing splendid work. That is her field, she knows it, loves it, and is able to give visitors a far better understanding of pictures than the mere catalogue would ever do."

Mrs. Woodward referred to another case, that of a young woman taxidermist who was appointed along with a group of men to do work in a museum.

"Flattering comments from all over the country have come in regarding her work," she said.

Mrs. Woodward explained that the Civil Works projects were carried out through funds transferred from the Public Works Administration. Each State and territorial Civil Works administrator was authorized to add to his staff a properly qualified woman to give her full time to women's work. These women immediately set to work to find and create jobs for other women. So great has been their versatility that women now are employed on the greatest variety of jobs in the history of the world.

Federal relief and recovery projects have been the means of opening up many unfamiliar avenues of usefulness for women. At the top are seen a number of women employed in a planting project at Greensboro, N. C. Below is a scene in the public library of Okemah, Okla., where girls are engaged in cleaning and repairing books. At right is Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of Jackson, Miss., widow of a judge and daughter of a former United States Senator, director of women's work of the FERA and CWA.

Former Editor O'Brien Tells How He Once Spurned Robert Frost's Poetry.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

In charming, rippling English Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the Tariff Commission, former editor of the Boston Transcript and member of the Pulitzer prize committee, enhances an already charming tale of how once upon a time years ago Mr. O'Brien spurned the poetry of Robert Frost.

When a Congregational minister, a friend of Mr. O'Brien, came to the Boston Transcript with glowing tales of the verse being written by a student at Pinkerton Academy, Derry, N. H., he was told firmly by Editor O'Brien that he not only would not print any school-boy verse, but would not even read the work of the budding poet, one Robert Frost.

And how the tables were turned for Poet Frost and how words were eaten and scorn withdrawn by former Editor O'Brien, when the Pulitzer prize committee voted honors to the poet with Mr. O'Brien's hearty consent!

Expanding the Picnic.

Pinch-hitting for the family larder the other night was a bounteous box lunch a young lieutenant of the U. S. A. had provided for a twosome with a very special girl. Before the boxed food could go on the picnic, the lieutenant's parents, Gen. and Mrs. —— discovered there was no other food in the house and the sandwiches and pickles and potato chips served for dinner at home for four, instead of a party for two on the highway.

Yesteryear Heroines Are Restored to Life

Love, at least in its romantic aspects, is not the same, yesterday today and forever. Fashions in sentimentality have been as changing during the last 75 years of American life as have fashions in dress.

First, there were gun-toting sweethearts of outlaws, then languishing ladies who fainted in strong men's arms, then chaste goddesses who reformed wild men, and finally wild women who were themselves reformed by earnest, broadminded males.

The story of these changing styles in the love life of the best seller heroine is revealed in collections in the Library of Congress. It will be told in a series of articles run next week in The Post. Watch for the account Monday of the old-time popular fiction heroine.

Pioneer Woman Smoker Reminisces

"Not Nice Girl" of Twenty Years Ago Had Hard Road to Travel.

A feminine correspondent informs the Woman's Page that "perfectly wonderful" grain-wood pipes for women are now on sale. "I am not going to sign my name," she writes, "because my family disapproves strongly of the pipe idea."

Twenty years ago girls found their families similarly chilly to the cigarette idea. A trail blazer in the nicotine field tells, in the following article, of her experiences.

By a Veteran Woman Smoker.

Since reading that students of Vassar College were to be permitted to smoke in their dormitory rooms, I have been filled with a desolating sense of age. I feel definitely numbered among the pioneers. For alas, I can only too well remember when no nice girl smoked.

I was one of the not-nice girls who did smoke. I began about 20 years ago. I shudder now to think of the furore my action raised. Not that women weren't smoking in Washington. In certain society circles it was considered an interesting and daring thing to do. But the sedate family to which I belong regarded a cigarette in the hands of a youth as nothing short of a "coffin nail," while in the hands of a girl it was nothing less than a symbol of sin.

I smoked my first cigarette on a dare while attending a slumber party. I smoked the next ten for the fun I got out of shocking stuffy respectables. After that, I smoked for sheer stubbornness and because I liked it.

My family raged futilely. Some strange determination made me hold out against them. Finally the minister was called in. "How would you," he asked, fixing me with a solemn eye, "like to see your dear mother smoking a filthy cigarette?"

"All right," I replied promptly, "if she liked it."

He stalked away disgusted.

The fact that my girl chum smoked gave me reinforcement. But it also magnified the offense. We were known generally as "those cigarette-smoking Brown and Smith girls." Certain mothers forbade their daughters to associate with us and warned their sons against us. I was defeated for president of my school literary society because it was whispered that I was a cigarette smoker.

After the first thrill of shocking the public was over, I became more conservative. I was willing to make concessions to the family, that is, not smoke in the presence of guests nor in other persons' homes. But I found it difficult to live up to my agreement.

For instance, there was Aunt Martha, a frequent visitor in our home. I am sure her heart would have stopped if she had seen me with a cigarette in my mouth. Even my father went on the back porch to smoke when she was around. Usually on hearing her coming, I would grab a newspaper and begin to fan the smoke-laden air. Then shouting that I was suffocating, I would throw open the door. One day I was frantically driving out the smoke with a large palm leaf fan when she entered.

"What on earth is the matter?" she demanded.

Opposition Merely Made Her More Determined to Carry On.

"I—I'm—just practicing my fan dance," I gasped.

Often as a guest in the homes of conservative friends I have endured agony at not being able to smoke or I have endangered my life by hanging over their fire escapes.

My mother pleaded with me never to smoke in the presence of men. "No worthwhile man will marry a woman who smokes," she warned me.

One night at a party a strange young man who did not know I smoked gave me a lecture on the folly of girls smoking—all the time puffing a cigarette. It made a woman "mannish" he declared, "ruined her teeth and fingers and spoiled her attraction for men."

"No man wants his mother, his sister or his wife to smoke," he exhorted.

Shortly afterward I saw him paying court to a siren who was smoking with an old world technique. I promptly lighted a cigarette. It did not injure my matrimonial chances. I later married the young man who had lectured me.

Soon I found that men were not so opposed to women's smoking as they pretended. In fact, they were valuable abettors of the practice. Whenever I was puffing a cigarette and some fussy dowager would enter the room I would quickly hand my fag to the man nearest me. He was invariably gallant.

We early-day smokers had to take one defense of conservatism after another. If we started to smoke in a restaurant or tea room it was a signal for a widespread admonition from a waiter. In a New York hotel I visited, a maid was kept busy passing cards to women guests telling them they could not smoke in the lobby.

When women first began to smoke on the street and in motor cars another hubbub arose. And it seems only yesterday that solemn-faced old ladies were whispering about that Miss Amy Lowell the late poet, "actually smoked cigars."

Now my 16-year-old daughter, who does not smoke because she wants to be different, tells me she has a hard social role to fill as an abstainer. She is fighting my youthful battle all over again, in reverse.

Erin Puts 3 Seconds Limit on Film Kisses

Dublin, Irish Free State, March 2 (AP).—Three seconds is the limit on screen kisses in Ireland. That's as long as James Montgomery, grey-haired censor, will let the actors hold 'em. When osculation gets beyond that limit, his scissors begin to snip.

Montgomery told about his job as he looked back ten years in office—a tenure in which he examined enough film to reach from Dublin to Hollywood and back.

Title Matches to Include Competition in Fours for First Time.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

For the first time in many years the National figure skating championship meet to be held at Philadelphia this month, will include competition in fours.

Intensive work must be done by the groups of four to gain the necessary harmony of movement and balance of line. When figures are executed in which the four separate, they must keep their design composition firmly knit.

Practice in teamwork will take in unusual lifts and spins, and will stress rhythmic unity. Figure skating differs from most other sports in always changing in nature. At present, there seems to be a trend to bring back simple, rhythmic movements, in place of the more acrobatic elaborations of recent competitions, according to Mrs. Daniel F. Secord, outstanding National skater.

Start of this trend was seen last year, when the ranking two pairs gave the judges a lot of trouble because one pair was a polished exponent of the old more complicated style, and the other of the new smooth movement.

One May Sigh.

By Katherine Smith.

One may sigh, as dreams are broken
And the last farewells are said;
Or, in silence, no word spoken,
One may see a love lie dead.

Yet, in loneliness, the crying
Smothers in a smothered breath—
And there may be deepest sighing
When there is lesser death.

Cheese Halibut $5 Prize Recipe

Mrs. Russell, Silver Spring, Given Award for Lenten Relief Suggestion.

There are so many fast days during the Lenten period that the housewife is wondering what next to serve when everyone is tired of fish, fish and more fish.

But Mrs. Charlotte Russell, of 810 Gist avenue, Silver Spring, Md., has solved the problem. She has submitted a halibut with cheese recipe, and informs the Food Editor that it is quite different from the ordinary fish dishes.

The $5 weekly prize, therefore, has been awarded to Mrs. Russell for the fish, but not too fishy, recipe which follows:

Halibut With Cheese.

2½ lbs. halibut.
2 cups white sauce.
½ lb. grated cheese.
Salt and pepper to taste.
2 tablespoons butter.

Remove bones and skins from halibut and cut flesh in thin slices about ¼ inch thick or 2 inches square. Grease a shallow baking dish, put some of the white sauce in the bottom and sprinkle with some of the grated cheese. Then put in a layer of halibut, season with salt and pepper. Repeat until all is used, having sauce and cheese on top. Put butter over the top and bake in a moderately hot oven until fish is done and the top is browned. Cook about 45 minutes. This recipe serves about six.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If you were born on March 3, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 7:30 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m.

If March 3 is your birthday, you are of a very unselfish disposition and always ready to help others. You may find that comparative strangers, knowing how very obliging you are, will try to take advantage of your good nature. Do not allow yourself to be imposed upon. It might also be advisable to remember: "Charity begins at home." Some people are always too ready to be of service to acquaintances, but let some one in their own household make a simple request, and numerous excuses are interposed. Your family deserve first consideration. Do not let your loyalty to your friends blind you to their faults.

The child born on March 3 can be developed into a marvelously sweet character. As it grows older it will display unbinding faith and trust in those it loves. Care must be exercised never to abuse this child's confidence. Having a sensitive nature and inclined to set those it adores upon a pedestal, it would receive a terrible shock if anything occurred that would destroy its faith in those it trusted. It may prove difficult to live up to the high standards a child establishes for us, but we can at least try, and there is always the possibility that we might succeed.

People born on March 3 possess a good deal of curiosity, but being instinctively refined, they do not let their inquisitiveness become objectionable. They have the knack of picking up a fund of information which would not be obtainable through books, so they are, as a rule, delightful and interesting conversationalists.

Successful people born on March 3.

Hairdressers To Movie Stars Ply Trade Here

Three Brought to Washington to Man New Beauty Salon at Hecht's.

A Spaniard, a Russian and an American stood up to face the firing squad.

The firing squad was a reporter. The three gentlemen were hairdressers. They were imported from New York by Hecht's department store to preside over its new beauty salon.

"I am Mr. Medina," said the first one. "I came from Barcelona, Spain."

"Mr. George," said the second, with a low bow. "I am Russian."

"And I am Mr. Albert—just plain American," volunteered the third.

Mr. Medina, Mr. George, and Mr. Albert have for many years plied their trade in this country and have made their mark even in Hollywood.

Three young actresses who thrill the American public today have coiffures to which they are indebted to the three.

Mr. Medina said he always did Rosita Moreno's hair. She would come to him, explain the type of picture in which she was going to appear—and leave the rest to him. And never one complaint, he says.

Sally Eilers nearly always wears her hair the same way, and that is the way which Mr. Albert found for her. He said he worked on her hair frequently but seldom talked to her. She was completly business, and he was completeely business. He studied her type for a long while and decided that she should have curls, lots of curls, to break the long line of her face. So curls there were. And curls there have been ever since. Mr. Albert further said that Miss Eilers was so pleased with her coiffure that she never changed it. In the evening she would wear a comb, a pin, or some ornament to match her frock.

Ruby Keeler, wife of Al Jolson, has such confidence in Mr. George that she told him to arrange a completely new coiffure for her. She left the matter to his discrimination. Mr. George says he brushed back the curls which she wore around her face and curled her hair higher on her head. Miss Keeler continues to wear her hair that way.

The three hairdressers were unanimous in agreeing that whereas some women could wear their hair the way movie stars do, it is a far safer bet to allow the hairdresser to originate something entirely individual and suited for the person.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Headaches.

There are several kinds of periodic headaches. The term migraine is now used to designate the group. When a person has the headache habit, and is very anxious to break it, the first step which can be called intelligent is to try to discover what kind of headache it is. Once a diagnosis of migraine was about as far as he could go. Now it is often possible to go a step farther. There are constipation headaches, bilious headaches, allergy headaches, pituitary headaches, and a fair number of others. The method of relief from the thralldom of his habit depends on the type of the headache.

Located near the base of the brain, and in a part of the skull near the upper back part of the orbit, is a nest-like bony walled cave called the sella turcica. In this cave or nest a very important structure—the pituitary body—is located.

This powerful gland has many important duties to perform. It is active at certain times and inactive at others. Activity calls for an increased blood supply. A gland filled with an extra supply of blood requires room. The pituitary can not swell much without pressing against the bony walls of its nest. There are those who hold that pituitary headaches are like toothaches caused by the efforts at swelling of soft parts held rigidly within bony walls.

Within limits it is possible to do something by way of prevention of pituitary headaches, and therefore it is desirable that we recognize headaches of that character. Headaches that are very closely related to sex phenomena, such as puberty, menstruation, pregnancy, and change of life are under suspicions of being pituitary. But we need additional evidence.

Dr. Beulah Cushman thinks the oculist may be able to supply the need. A very careful study of the visual field by a competent person will show certain pecularities that are thought to be distinctive of disorders of the pituitary. The visual field is limited, especially in that part that points toward the inner corner of the eyebrow. Glaucoma gives a somewhat similar limitation of the visual field, but a test of the tension of the eyeball should rule out glaucoma. This affected zone in the visual field may show some sort of color blindness rather than an absence of all vison.

This method of helping in the diagnosis of pituitary headache is something the patient may avail himself of through competent medical service. It is not a test that he can make on himself. In some cases of pituitary headache operation to split the capsule of the pituitary, or to relieve the pressure in some other way, has afforded relief. Other headaches of the pituitary kind have been relieved to some extent by the use of gland extracts and other treatment.

Woman's Home Preserves Rise To Big Business

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Queer that a single request for homemade preserves could start a real business. But that's what happened. Back in 1926 a woman in Danville, Ill., had a bridge party and served her friends some of her jams, preserves and pickles. One of the guests approached her hostess just before leaving and somewhat hesitantly asked her if she'd mind making some of her products on special order. The hostess was very glad to do so.

That was the beginning. Soon came daily calls from the woman's circle of friends for sauces, chutneys, relishes, conserves, jams and marmalades. Before long, strangers called in with orders, and then came letters from out of town.

One day an order came from a prominent Chicago food distributor for 12,000 pints of these delicacies. This necessitated rapid maneuvering, for her home kitchen was far too small to accommodate such an order. A small jam kitchen was hastily rigged up in the back yard and the woman set to work in earnest.

Orders came so rapidly that it was soon necessary to obtain larger quarters. Now the products are sent throughout the United States. It is possible to purchase many of them here in Washington. Others that are not available may be ordered from the central office.

The local store that carries them has some of the distinctive "pickled raisins"—delicious with ham. Also the pickled red raspberries, gooseberries, honey pineapple conserve, cherry currant conserve, "My Delight" conserve and "My Favorite" conserve. There's some pickled peach marmalade with a taste as different as it is delectable, and some watermelon pickle with the mint flavor. (Hail, all ye Southerners!) These sell two for 25 cents.

Table Biscuit Baker.

An electric biscuit baker designed to rest right on the table and turn out hot biscuits by the dozens all during the meal is a real attribute to a dinner.

The baker is so reasonably priced that any housewife can afford it. She will find that during the hurry and scuffle of getting breakfast in the morning a quick-baking service will save time and prevent inconvenience.

Fine, light biscuits and rolls are only part of what the baker can achieve. It can also be used for corn cake, bran muffins, cup cakes, &c.

Birthday Cakes.

A local pastry shop, a small shop but filled with quality goods, has a cook that makes birthday cakes—loves making them, in fact—and the fancier he makes them the better he likes it. Left alone with his imagination allowed free reign he makes the lightest and fluffiest of sugar flowers and butterflys, and even scribbles in sugary letters across the top of a cake.

He'll make a small one (it really isn't so small!) for as little as $1. And he'll spend all manner of time and effort on a big six-pounder. When it's done, with the final finishing touch—it's a work of art!

But he isn't always busy on birthday cakes—even though he'd like to be, for today he was down at the shop bright and early turning out fresh strawberry tarts, really fresh, too, apple tarts, lemon meringue and pineapple tarts. Each one is so large and liberally filled that it alone is sufficient for dessert. They're priced low—3 for 25 cents.

When the cook finished his tarts, he straightway tackled some orange cake. Yesterday the manager had come into the shop with an old recipe and told him that here was the way her mother had made orange cake, "the best orange cake ever made." So the cook looked over the recipe and decided he liked it. He got his fresh eggs, butter and oranges and started in. Both batter and icing have orange juice and pulp in them.

These cakes weigh between a pound and a pound and three-fourths. They sell for 35 cents apiece.

Unusual Delicacies.

A downtown store received a shipment of unusual delicacies the other day. To watch them being carried out of the stock room and placed on the shelves afforded a half hour of real interest. Among the first to be brought out were some caviar puffs, fragile little pastry patties in assorted shapes, carefully packed in cardboard boxes and wrapped in oil paper. Second were the packages of large grained caviar. Shopping around for this is likely to send one all over town. It's nice to know just where they can be found to save a lot of time. There were also some boxes of cheese logs, long slender delicious cheese-bread sticks, ideal to serve with beer.

Hot Cross Buns and German Apple Cake Have Same Base

By Ann Barrett.

Time for crowing, when—from the same basic mixture—you can turn out two such timely, tasty items as hot-cross buns and German apple-cake. (Both high favorites with Marlene Dietrich and millions more.)

Here's how to perform this double-header. First bring 1 cup milk to the boiling point, then cool it to lukewarm, and dissolve in it 1 cake compressed yeast and 1 tablespoon sugar. Next beat into this mixture 1½ cups sifted bread flour, cover with towel, and let rise in warm place till light and spongy (about 1 hour). Then cut this sponge down with a knife, and beat in 1 egg (well-beaten) and ¼ cup shortening (first creamed with 1-3 cup suger). Next add 2¼ cups flour (first sifted with ¼ teaspoon salt, ¾ teaspoon mace or nutmeg, and then mixed with the grated rind of 1 lemon and ½ cup raisins). Knead this mixture lightly till smooth, then put it into greased bowl, cover with towel, and let rise till double (about 2 hours).

Here's where the dough divides! Take ½ of it and shape into round buns about the size of a walnut. Place these on a well-greased pan about 2 inches apart, cover with a towel and let rise again till double in bulk. Then, if you'd like your buns to have shiny tops, brush them with 1 egg slightly beaten with 1 teaspoon water. Bake about 20 minutes in a hot oven (about 425 degrees F.). When cool, mark with a cross made of the following: Mix into 1 tablespoon of hot milk enough sifted confectioner's sugar to make paste that will drop but not run. Squeeze through a cornucopia made from stiff, clean paper. Or, if you prefer, omit egg-glazing and icing, and just coat buns thickly with powdered sugar.

Now for a step-by-step description of how the second half of that dough gets to be a delicious apple-cake. It has had two risings, you remember. So now you roll it out about ½ inch thick, and fit it into a well-greased shallow pan about 7 by 11 inches, or 8 inches square. Then brush it with 2 tablespoons melted butter and 3 tablespoons of the following mixture: 2-3 cup granulated sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Then pare, core, and cut 5 tart apples into eighths. Overlap these pieces on the apple-cake, pressing the thin edge of each piece into the dough.

Next, drip 3 tablespoons melted butter over the apples, and sprinkle with remaining sugar and cinnamon. Let rise 30 minutes in a hot oven (about 400 F.). Cover the pan with another pan the first 8 or 10 minutes, to steam the apples. Serve hot or cold, for breakfast or as a snack with coffee. Or serve with whipped cream for dessert.

Mrs. Ann. Barrett,

Susan Mills Tells How to Prepare Delectable Turkish Coffee and Orange Curacao, but One Must Find Her Own Russian Cigarette.

By Susan Mills.

A young woman once remarked that to her a real feeling of luxury would be an opportunity to consume a cup of Turkish coffee, a glass of orange curacao and a long Russian cigarette all at the same time.

The picture appeals to the imagination. A sip of one, then a sip of the other, and a deep draw on the cigarette—who wouldn't feel luxurious?

But it brings about a problem—the curacao. This smooth and delectable liqueur, fragrant of orange, strongly sweet, is most expensive if bought in bottles. Why not make your own? Call it

Orange Liqueur.

Grind in food chopper the rinds of 12 or 13 oranges. Place in a two-quart covered jar and add enough alcohol to cover. Let stand in dark place for 22 days. Strain through four thicknesses of cheesecloth. Boil 2½ pounds of sugar with a pint of cold water exactly 11 minutes. When syrup is cold add to the alcohol strained off the rinds. Let it stand three days and add three tablespoons thick cream. Filter through French gray filter paper.

This should make exactly two quarts. If it is not, add enough additional alcohol to make the required amount.

An old-fashioned recipe that might be interesting to try is the simple one for cherry or grape cordial. Put 5 pounds of sour cherries or grapes into a demijohn with 2 quarts of French brandy or spirits. Cork and let stand for six weeks. Then boil two scant pounds of sugar with 1½ pints water for 5 minutes, and when nearly cold add liquor from demijohn. Strain and bottle.

One may substitute black raspberries for the cherries or grapes.

The thick, strong Turkish coffee is a surprisingly easy thing to make. An Armenian will pour a heap of the pulverized coffee into a saucepan, add water and sugar and allow the whole to come to a boil; set it aside a moment to settle, then pour it off carefully into demi-tasse cups. A few seconds of further settling and it can be drunk, leaving the grounds in the bottom of the cup.

Beggars All

The Story Thus Far.

Rafe Courvoisier, last member of an impoverished Southern family, is released from a secret outlaw rendezvous by Madrone, its ruler, on his promise to obey Madrone's orders. They will be written to him in a unique green ink. Candle Island, his family home in Chetteraw, has been bought by Hortense Kendall, a rich and beautiful girl from the North. Rafe takes service as her boatman. She falls in love with him, and he tells her of his enslavement by Madrone. She gives him a letter from her guardian, Harmon Jay. It is written in Madrone's green ink, and instructs Rafe to bring Bettine Dare, his cousin, to Candle Island as chaperon.

Rafe started home at sunup after a night more exciting than he had planned. He remembered with some uneasiness the follies he had spoken and had listened to . . . and Hortense's good night.

"You've had a happy, evening Miss Kendall?"

"Take me out in the boat tomorrow," she said in a voice of smothered feeling. I want to go out to sea, very far. I was never meant for . . . this."

"You take it too hard. When you get used to it, it won't be 'this'; It'll just be a good time, a girl's good time. Don't you like these people? They're saying wonderful things about you."

She smiled at that. "I'm glad. I want them to like me. I—I liked your cousin best, I think. Mr. Randal Crewe. I never knew a man like that before, like some one out of a play. He made love to me. He was fascinating. I think I get along better with the older men. There's a queer Mr. Tasket, who stood beside me a lot whenever I wasn't dancing, though he didn't dance. But he was watching his wife all the time. You are the only boy I feel at home with, somehow."

"Boy? I'm terribly old, compared to you. And I certainly don't feel much like a boy."

"I suppose not. You aren't a very good boy, I imagine. But there's something sort of . . . reckless and rough about you that's like a boy."

Tint touched her arm, was murmuring. Hortense became docile again. "Oh, Mrs. Romboudt, must you really go?"

Rafe went down along the gardens, bright now with morning radiance.

Chapter XII.

Rafe ran up the trail and threw open his door. As he did so, a boat bumped against the landing, oars were deliberately shipped, a step mounted. The opposite door opened. It was broad daylight now.

A most astonishing figure stood there on his threshold: A tall, stooping, scholarly figure of a man in a faultless linen suit, with a narrow, sunburnt, hollow face under a panama hat, with eyes hidden by sun glasses, binoculars slung over his shoulder, gloved hands, and a cane. The man, bony and tall, had the air rather of a tourist than of a sportman. He spoke instantly, after his start of surprise, in the over-accented voice of an underbred Englishman.

"Oh, my dear sir, I beg your pardon. I'd no notion . . ."

"It's rather an unusual hour for an informal visitor," suggested Rafe, watchful.

The man had again pushed open the door which had fallen shut behind him. Rafe could see his rowboat manned by a shabby fellow whose back was turned. He sat slouched down under a large straw hat, a Negro probably.

"My dear sir, I can't sufficiently apologize. I fanced the island to be deserted."

"It is the property of a—of a family named Kendall. Surely you must have seen the buildings at the other end?"

"I had been told that the owner was dead, or had gone away."

"The former owner. The place has been sold. You are a visitor in Chetteraw?"

A Fisherman-Tourist.

"I am a fisherman-tourist. I'm camping out yonder on the dunes. In search of health. I am by way of being an ornithologist and early morning in hot climates is a good hour for bird study. Your name,"—he took out a note book and a fountain pen—"is Kendall, sir?"

"No, I'm the boatman." Rafe's tone was short. "Can I do anything for you, Mr.——?"

"Taylor. James Taylor. From New York City."

"Then it was you that—er—the family—had noticed." Rafe with exaggerated caution did not want the man to know that this lonely island's owner was a girl of 19 with no near and resident male kin. The tourist get-up had not altogether convinced him and beneath the too-heavy British accent ran an alien lisp and ripple, like an ambushed snake.

Taylor at the moment made an ejaculation of annoyance. His fountain pen, it appeared, was dry. "This region," he said, "interests me. It's a hobby of mine to jot down names and I've a poor memory. May I?" he suggested, and without further invitation he opened one of the inkwells and began to fill his pen. An instant later he jerked the small instrument aside, sprinkling the cuff of his sleeve with viridescent liquid.

After a queer pause, "I'm sorry," said Rafe. "You've stained your coat."

"Green Ink!"

The man had made a sharp slicking sound: "Green ink!"

"Yes," Rafe remembered that Hortense had filled one of his inkwells with Mr. Jay's "business" ink. "A very vivid shade, too, isn't it? I'm afraid you'll have trouble getting it out. Here, give me your coat. I'll rinse it instantly in my basin."

The man very slowly removed his coat. Rafe took the garment impatiently and went into his bedroom. He had an impulse to look at his gun. He put it into his pocket; then, feeling ashamed, returned it to its drawer. Then he tried unsuccessfully to remove the stain and came back to his visitor.

"I'm sorry——" The man had gone.

There was a surprisingly distant and faint sound of oars. He had gone without waiting for his coat. Perhaps he had seen, through the half-open door of the bedroom, his host taking out that pistol and had been startled into flight.

Thought Rafe, "Well, I'm in one perfectly good linen jacket," and hung it, with its wet sleeve, on a nail. He was annoyed. He had wanted to question Mr. Taylor further. Camping over on Dune Bar, was he? Well, that would bear investigation. It was not impossible for an island boatman to get over to that sand spit and explore. He might tell Hortense and take her on the expedition.

• • • •

When the last of her guests had gone, Hortense Kendall went upstairs, threw aside her misty dancing dress, kicked off her high-heeled dancing slippers, and, wrapping about her a gold-colored robe, walked about that bedroom so magnificently reconstructed for her use that the ghost of a proud and faded gentlewoman, Suzette Courvoisier, could never haunt it, not even in Bettine Dare's wistful memory.

Hortense shot off her questions now like some young general. Tine gave her the histories of Chetteraw. Langdon Tasket was a man who gambled and who lost. He'd lost Lilian's love, had never really won it, and was, they said, risking his great fortune recklessly again and again to amass the wealth which was his only hold upon her. As for Randal Crewe—Tine's voice grew a little more remote—he was so poor, he would be homeless even. His house and his plantation were mortgaged and there had been a threat of foreclosure. Yes, he was desperate. Gallant, chivalrous, but desperate and lost.

"You're tired." Hortense announced. "I'm a selfish idiot. Please go to bed, Tine dearest. I know most of it now, don't I? I can begin to understand these strange, helpless people. Good morning. You were beautiful tonight. Sleep late. I won't let any one disturb you."

Tine allowed herself to be kissed; then, suddenly remorseful, returned the girl's embrace, laughed a little at her compliment and went away to bed.

But she would not have laughed at the girl who sat alone and dumb there by the window. Hortense looked along the island and she thought of Rafe Courvoisier. He was in danger. He, too, was hungry, beggared, lost. But, unlike Randal Crewe that night—and as to this incident Hortense had kept her counsel—Rafe had not told her that he had "always needed her," that she was "born to help him." No, Rafe had confided his desperation to her only to keep free from her tenderness.

Rafe would not be helped. He would not have her love. He'd rather be an outlaw, the slave of outlaws, than be loved by her. And when he had kissed her—Hortense threw back her head against the wainscoted side of the deep window and pressed down her lids against the tears. Deliberately she fought the pain of love and of fear for her beloved, and set her anger and scorn on guard against them.

She was not yet asleep nor thinking of sleep when Tine came again with a soft, urgent knocking. Hortense opened the door. Tine, in her wrapper, looked startled.

Someone in From Sea.

"Hortense, someone came in from the sea . . . in a boat . . . just now. It's 4 o'clock. Who would be coming that way at this hour?"

Hortense widened her eyes a little and smiled carelessly. "Streno or Rondo or any of the lot coming back from a spree in Chetteraw, I suppose."

"No, Hortense. My bedroom faces the sea, not the harbor side. I was wakened by the small sound a boat would make landing very cautiously on a sand beach. It was just that one sound and I think it was its stealthiness that woke me. I went out on that little balcony. I could hear voices, very low and rapid, speaking Italian. Presently three people came out of the shrubbery and crossed a part of the lawn in moonlight. One was Rondo . . ."

"Then it's certainly all right. We needn't do anything about it."

"He was carrying something, it might have been a bag or a bundle. One was his son, Eugenio, that very handsome fellow. But the third was a stranger. Hortense, I'm quite sure I never saw him before anywhere on the island. He didn't look like a gardener or a house servant . . ."

"There might be a dozen of these men that you wouldn't recognize, Tine. Hasn't someone been away on a vacation or a business trip?"

"Would he come back from the sea side of the island in a quiet boat at 4 o'clock in the morning, Hortense?"

Another House Ballot on Pay Is Promised

Leaders Defend Rainey in Referring Bill Back to Committee.

Separate votes will be allowed the House membership on each Senate amendment to the independent offices bill, as modified by the House Appropriations Committee, Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, said yesterday.

Chairman Buchanan said the committee will meet early next week and will have the modified bill ready for action on the House floor before the end of the week.

Restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries, effective February 1, and another 5 per cent, effective July 1, seemed likely to be recommended by the committee, the chairman said.

5-and-5 Plan Likely.

"I am not speaking for the committee. The committee hasn't met. But I think the plan for 5 per cent now and 5 per cent more July 1 is likely to be approved," he said.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee which had charge of the independent offices bill, said that "reports that reference of the bill to the committee is a move to chloroform it to death are without any foundation whatever."

Whether the committee will be called on Monday will depend on compilation of figures asked for by Representative Buchanan. "I have asked for the figures because I believe we should have the data which will show us the exact meaning and cost of what we do," he said.

Rainey Defended.

The statement of the appropriations chairman followed the lines of statements from other Democratic leaders and came at a time when representatives of veterans in both House and Senate were seeking to strengthen their lines against Administration disapproval of too greatly increased benefits.

Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, one of the leaders for full pay restoration and increased veterans benefits, said sufficient votes had been pledged in the Senate to prevent passage of the Independent Offices bill without increased benefits and pay.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, majority leader, promised the House would be given opportunity to vote on the disputed sections in replying to charges that Speaker Rainey had referred the bill back to committee to keep the questions from a vote on the floor.

Fearing Riot, 500 Prisoners Isolated

Idleness Causes Unrest in Indiana Reformatory.

Indianapolis, March 2 (AP).—Gov. Paul V. McNutt disclosed today that because of recent disturbances at the State Reformatory, 500 prisoners are being kept in their cells day and night.

Disorders have been frequent within the last few days, the Governor said, but he insists that at no time have they been of serious proportions.

Unrest among the prisoners was attributed by the Governor to idleness and overcrowded conditions. He said that when several industries in the institution were closed following the interstate shipment of prison-made goods, hundreds of the prisoners were left without employment.

Killeen Gets Drink Permit Over Protest

Liquor Board Refuses to Support "Hearsay," Grants License.

Setting aside the objection of Lieut. George Little, head of the vice squad, that Edward V. Killeen was a "big-shot gambler who stays in the dark," the Liquor Control Board yesterday granted a wholesale liquor license to the prominent sportsman.

Chairman George W. Offutt declared the testimony of Little against Killeen was pure hearsay, which would not even justify a suspicion that Killeen was engaged in gambling enterprises.

Little testified Killeen had a bad reputation for law observance and that he is known as a big-shot gambler; but under cross-examination by Harry A. Whelan and F. Joseph Donohoe, attorneys for Killeen, the witness admitted he had no facts upon which to base his opinion.

Little Testifies.

"Has Killeen ever been convicted in a gambling case?" Whelan asked.

"No. He always stays in the background and we have never been able to get him," Little replied.

Under further examination, Little admitted he had never seen Killeen in a gambling place, nor had he ever uncovered any evidence in a raid which linked Killeen to the racket. He admitted his testimony was based on what other people had told him.

Board's Statement.

The board declared:

"The board feels that there is a distinction between good moral character and good reputation, and that as opposed to the sworn statement of the applicant, whose veracity was not impeached in any way, it could hardly be influenced by pure hearsay evidence as to the character of Mr. Killeen. This being true, the board feels that the applicant has sustained the onus cast upon him of showing that he is of good moral character."

In its decision, the board said:

"When a boy, his father instructed the police force of the District to arrest him whenever he was found in the vicinity of what was known as the redlight district, and that he had never been guilty of vagrancy, and that he had a home and a method of living.

Last Charge in 1929.

"The records show the last gambling charge to have been on August 8, 1925, when a deposit of $50 was forfeited. He forfeited collateral on April 1, 1929, for being drunk, and on May 16, 1929, for being disorderly."

On direct examination, Killeen testified that he "is not now nor never had been engaged in gambling, either directly or indirectly." He declared he had been engaged in the beer business in the District since the legalization of 3.2 beer and he is interested in clubs in Arkansas and Georgia. He offered to bring data to the board showing sources of his income.

Killeen was granted a license to sell light wines and beers at wholesale at his establishment, Fourth and Channing streets northeast.

Dry Town

Hagerstown Water Supply Fast Waning.

Hagerstown, Md., March 2 (Spl.). Hagerstown will be forced to turn to the Potomac River for its entire water supply next week unless there is a thaw, Supt. Albert Heard announced. Springs which feed the two mountain reservoirs are dry and some of the streams which flow into the reservoir have been frozen most of February.

The winter has been one of the driest in years, many farmers being forced last month to haul water for their stock and own use because cisterns, wells and springs went dry.

Hagerstown normally obtains two-thirds of its water supply from its mountain reservoirs and the other third it pumps from the Potomac River. When the city has to turn entirely to the Potomac River, the expense for pumping is considerable.

Wholesalers Rush Liquor; Sales Calmer

Prices Are Still Lower in District; Drunk Arrests Gain.

Washington began taking repeal a little more calmly yesterday, as it became possible to buy a quart of champagne or a bottle of gin without running the risk of being crushed in the rush.

However, business continued brisk, both at the liquor stores and at hotels, restaurants and clubs selling by the drink. Stocks were not too plentiful in the liquor stores, and some of them displayed long rows of empty shelves. Wholesale dealers, however, were making deliveries rapidly. There was said to be no reason to fear a shortage, although the supply of finer wines and liquors still was limited.

Price competition continued, and it was possible for the careful liquor buyer to save money by shopping around. The cut-rate store put in a definite appearance, but its stocks consisted for the most part of lower quality brands.

Maryland to Meet Prices.

Prices were lower generally than those in Maryland, but there was a promise that Maryland dispensaries would meet the District prices. Business was noticeably less brisk in the Maryland stores, as residents of the District began patronizing home merchants.

The cocktail hour yesterday again found hotels and restaurants crowded and night clubs were preparing for a big Saturday night as Washington celebrates the first week-end opportunity to drink legally in 17 years.

Sampling Popular.

Customers who have been drinking doubtful gin and liquor for years made it a point to sample many fancy drinks and mixtures strange to them. And in many instances the fancy concoctions were just as strange to the drink mixers—there is no such thing as a bartender—as they were to the customers. The time-worn warning "don't mix your drinks" was not very generally heeded.

The police department found it necessary to act in some instances and there was a pick-up in arrests for drunkenness.

Fifty-nine arrests on charges of intoxication have been recorded by police during the past two days. Of these only three were charged with driving automobiles while drunk.

The inebriates were arrested in only 5 of the 12 precincts. The First Precinct had 37; the Second, 7; the Third, 8; the Fourth, 4, and the Sevenths, 3.

Police Have Difficulties.

However, there have been numerous days, when repeal was just a subject for conversation, when more drunkenness was reported than during the first day of legal drinking.

Policemen found personal difficulties in addition to strictly official ones. They have orders not to enter a place where liquor is sold except on official business. Because nearly every restaurant is selling liquor, they were having trouble locating places to eat. If the selling of drinks spreads much farther, Washington may see its policemen going to work with dinner pails.

Norfolk, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—A jury in the United States District Court today awarded Mrs. Louise J. Barney, Dayton, Ohio, $165,000 for about 1,700 acres of land she owns at Jamestown.

Police Guard Local Roads After Holdup

Richmond Bank Guard Robbed of $60,000 by Six Bandits.

Gang Used Auto Stolen Here and Headed for Capital.

All roads from Virginia into the District of Columbia were guarded yesterday and police questioned persons arriving from Richmond by train in an unsuccessful effort to capture six bandits who robbed a Richmond bank messenger of $60,000.

The messenger was overpowered on a street in the Virginia capital and his six assailants escaped in an automobile, stolen in Washington, February 21. It was believed the car was heading for Washington. Another clew, however, indicated it may have gone south.

A Richmond ticket agent told of selling tickets for Wilkesbarre, Pa., to six men. When the train bearing the men arrived in Washington, police questioned them and found they were on their way to a funeral.

The victim of the bandits was William Coghill, 55, an employe of the State-Planters Bank & Trust Co. Coghill, accompanied by a colored porter, was surrounded on the street by the six bandits, who took his gun and a satchel containing the money. Coghill put up no resistance.

He later explained that he at first thought the men were joking. He said employes of the bank had often approached him on the street, pretending to be holdup men.

The holdup occurred at the Ninth street entrance of an alley near Main street in the business district. Three of the holdup men brandished revolvers. Four girls on the second floor of a nearby office building saw the holdup, but their screams failed to attract police.

Police learned that the automobile used in the robbery was stolen from F. M. Smith, formerly of Roanoke.

Both Coghill and the porter are veteran employes of the bank. The loss was covered by insurance. The Virginia Bankers Association offers a reward of $500 for capture of the fugitives.

Carnera to Tour South America; Garden Takes $30,000 Loss

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN couldn't beat Primo Carnera, but he seems to have won the unofficial championship of the world, for Max Baer, who, apparently, will come into possession of the title when, and if, he meets up with the Leaning Tower of Venice within the confines of a 16-foot ring.

Reports filtering in from the battle scene at Miami during the past 24 hours are interpreted to mean that Primo's greatness is confined to his physique. El Ponderoso's inability to stow away an overstuffed light heavyweight within the prescribed 15 rounds presents the spectacle of a world heavyweight champion with plenty of paunch but no punch.

The great big Eyetalian was even actually staggered by the right hand of Loughran, who, as fighters go, can't punch his way out of a cobweb, and thus there is a rising doubt, as far as this department is concerned, of Primo's ability to take it where it counts—on the button, which Primo is in the habit of carrying around loose and fancy free.

Not Easy to Hit.

There is a portion of balm for Primo in the disgrace of his inability to iterrupt Loughran before the end of the fight, inasmuch as Friend Tommy is no easy fellow to hit. Laying a glove on Loughran when Tommy was in his prime was considerel a feat and if he didn't bring the speed of his youth into the ring with him at Miami, he brought all of his ring lore.

But it was not until Carnera used the full advantage of his 86-pound pull in the weights to wear Loughran down that he succeeded in catching up with the challenger. The mauling to which he subjected Tommy in the corners after wrestling him to the ropes sapped the strength of Loughran and weakened him for the kill.

And in the last three rounds, with Tommy begging to be knocked out, Carnera could only push and shove and produce nothing resembling a punch expected of a world champion. A knockout would have salvaged for Primo some of the prestige he gained in the Sharkey victory, but there was no knockout punch in either of Primo's huge fists despite the fact that Loughran was operating along the lines of least resistance barring native courage.

May Restore Glory.

A Carnera-Baer fight, however, promises to restore some of the glory of the heavyweight ranks, which took its worst rap since the dark ages of pugilism when only 8,600 paid to see Loughran remain upright against the Leaning Tower.

Baer is no Loughran by several hundred left jobs in the course of an evening, but neither is Loughran a Baer when the discussion veers to punching. Primo need expose his chin merely once to the right hand that aBer brought around from backstage to drop Schmeling in the seventh round, and Americans will not be annoyed any further with an Italian champion of the world.

But, as I was saying, a Baer-Carnera fight has its possibilities. If Primo attempts to bruise and maul Maxie in the manner in which he handled the 185-pound Loughran, the Leaning Tower may discover he, himself, is in rough hands. If there is one item in prize fighting that appeals more to Baer than roughing, it is more roughing.

Mr. Carnera's Side.

On the inevitable other hand, Baer will not be moving about with the same alacrity as Loughran moved down at Miami, where Primo found himself shadow boxing for the first six rounds. Those big, cloub-like fists will descend on Baer every so often, and Carnera, if he indeed has no punch, may find himself winning by a process of erosion.

Baer will not be in there to fight the calculating battle that Loughran fought, and a moment or two of carelessness may find him impaling himself on one of Primo's fists. If the incident is repeated often enough, Baer will find himself outpointed, barring a knockout.

King Closes Season; Beaten by Teachers

Bristol, Va., March 2 (Spl.).—King College closed its basket ball season last night, losing to the East Tennessee State Teachers at Johnson City, 38 to 35.

The Kingmen played perhaps their flashiest basket ball of the year and managed to keep ahead most of the way in a nip-and-tuck struggle. They led at the half and were not overtaken until the final seconds of play.

Dunbar Quintet Rallies To Beat Cardozo, 19-10

The Dunbar High School five captured the last conference game from Cordozo High in a last-half rally that resulted in an ultimate 19-10 score. Both teams galloped madly about the Cardozo floor to a 10-all tie at the end of the first half.

In the second half Dunbar had already scored seven points while holding the opposition scoreless, when Crowder, a second-string guard, dropped a beautiful snowbird in the last 30 seconds to make the count 19-10.

Mal Stevens New Coach At N. Y. U.

Former Yale Mentor Is Named to Succeed Jake Cann.

To Assume Job in Time for Spring Practice; Aids to Be Chosen.

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP).—Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, of Yale fame, was appointed head football coach at New York University tonight.

A member of Yale's coaching staff for ten years, from 1924 through 1933, and head coach of the Elis from 1928 through 1932, Stevens will succeed Howard (Jake) Cann at N. Y. U. Cann resigned on February 1 under fire of undergraduate and alumni criticism after the Violets had won only two games, tied one and lost four last season. He retained his post as basket ball coach, however.

The terms of Stevens' contract were not made public, but it was assumed to be for one year.

Takes Charge Soon.

Now an interne at New Haven Hospital, Stevens will take charge of football affairs on University Heights as soon as weather conditions permit the start of spring practice.

No assistant coaches have as yet been named, but it was announced the full staff would be selected before the start of spring practice.

In the announcement of Stevens' selection, Dr. Philip O. Badger, chairman of the board of athletic control, and himself a Yale man, said:

"Over the period of the last few weeks there has been much speculation in several quarters as to whether or not there was to be a change in the university's established athletic policy. May I take this opportunity to state that no change is planned, or has been planned. We are fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Stevens, who is in full accord with these policies.

Eight Games Carded.

This reference was to the policy of deemphasization adopted by the university after the departure from University Heights of John F. ("Chick") Meehan, who had gained National recognition for the school's football team.

The team will play an eight-game schedule next season with major contests against Fordham, Lafayette, Carnegie Tech, Rutgers and Georgetown.

The schedule, made public tonight, follows:

October 6, Johns Hopkins, at Ohio Field; 13, West Virginia Wesleyan, at Ohio Field; 20, Lafayette, at Yankee Stadium; 27, Georgetown, at Yankee Stadium. November 3, Carnegie Tech, at Yankee Stadium; 10, City College of New York, at Ohio Field; 17, Rutgers, at New Brunswick; 29, (Thanksgiving), Fordham, at Yankee Stadium.

Giant Regulars Win Game, 5 to 3

Grantham's Bat Prominent as 2d Team Bows.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 2 (U.P.).—The champion New York Giants played their first game of the season today as the Regulars defeated the Receipts, 5 to 3.

Bill Terry, manager, was back in uniform after his trip to New York for the funeral of John McGraw. Terry did not play.

Gun Club Schedules Varied March Program

The extensive trap-shooting program for March will be inaugurated this afternoon by the Washington Gun Club marksmen at Benning. The card includes regular 50-target events for the Fries, Beall and Sharp three-month trophy and an added trophy for the first 50.

March 17, St. Patrick's Day, will bring a return match with the Oriole Gun Clubmen, of Baltimore, who were vanquished in the first match in January. Fifty target races are scheduled March 10 and 31.

Young Alumni Succeed at Florida

ATLANTA, March 2 (AP).—So far as the University of Florida is concerned, the experiment of entrusting athletics to a group of young alumni has proved, at least, temporarily, successful.

There were some lifting of eyebrows, shaking of heads and mumblings a year ago when Florida swept its athletic house clean and brought in a quartet of youths, only a few years out of college, to take charge.

The portion of the student body and the alumni who were doubtful of the advisability of such a move were sportsmen enough to hold their tongues until the boys were given a trial. And, now, the school's graduates are strong for the new regime.

Grid Renaissance.

The football team, which suffered a disastrous season in 1932, was one of the best in the South last fall under the guidance of Dennis (Dutch) Stanley, a fine end on the 1929 club.

The basket ball quintet, coached by Ben Clemons, a center on Florida's 1932 club, was the sensation of the basket ball tournament just concluded here. Never figured in the advance speculations and thrown against the unbeaten Kentucky team, a heavy favorite to win the title, in the first round, Florida unloosed a courageous assault that bowled over Kentucky, and Vanderbilt as well, to carry the "Fighting 'Gators" into the championship round.

Justified Fans' Faith.

Although beaten by Alabama, the team earned the honor of being the first to represent Florida in a championship cage battle and justified the faith placed in its inexperienced coach.

Stanley, Clemons and Rainey Cawthon and Ernest Bowyer are the four young fellows who were chosen to head Florida's athletics. Cawthon is in charge of the intramural and freshman program, while Bowyer assists in football and other sports.

Flying Cadet Wins Again at Orleans

New Orleans, March 2 (AP).—With Buddy Haas in the saddle, Flying Cadet, a 4-year-old son of Busy American, came from behind to win the 6-furlong feature at the Fair Grounds today.

In chalking up his second straight victory and his fourth in six starts at the Crescent City course, Flying Cadet just managed to get up in the final strides to nose out Don Vern with the 7-year-old By Product third in the field of seven.

Haas, riding one of his good races, sent the winner over the three-quarters of a mile in 1:13 1-5 after Bing Crosby had set the early pace and then gave way to Don Vern at the head of the stretch. Flying Cadet moved into third position as the leaders turned for home and then began his victorious drive.

Despite a record, which includes two seconds in addition to his victories at the Fair Grounds, Flying Cadet paid $8.80 for $2.

Schmidt Named Coach Of Ohio State Football

Columbus, Ohio, March 2 (AP).—Francis Schmidt today was appointed head football coach at Ohio State University, succeeding Sam Willaman, resigned.

The Texan was handed a three-year contract, beginning June 1, when Willaman's present contract expires.

Losing Fight All Around

By Paul Gallico.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 2 (Spl.)—(Homeward bound).—If one were looking for a name to hang onto the late and lamented heavyweight championship struggle under a full moon and the bending palms of Miami, one might call it The Fight That Did Nobody Any Good. To list some of the calamities—The Madison Square Garden Corporation lost money and prestige. Carnera lost all his prestige—what remained after the Paulino Uzcudun fight, and got a little petty cash in exchange for it—Loughran acquired a little glory, but a bad mauling, no money to speak of, and he failed in his quest for the heavyweight championship and will never get another chance to fight for it. No matter how game he was, Loughran did not do what he said he would do, which was to beat Carnera, so the fight did him no good. Miami got a black eye for its weather, with plenty of bad publicity. Even the referee didn't look like much of a bargain. And all the experts who said that Tom wouldn't last six rounds looked even worse.

The fight itself was fascinating. I am not ashamed of having picked Loughran to win. My suspicions that Carnera can't fight and never could fight were more than substantiated. He is, my dearly beloved clients, a terrible cheese. He is one of the worst fighters ever to hold the title.

He won because he was allowed to wrestle and bull, to hold and hit, to hit on the breaks, to lean his bulk on Loughran on the ropes, to foul and rough at every opportunity. His punch is a joke. Tommy has never been noted for his ability to take it, especially in late years. Primo hit Tom enough clean shots to the head and wind to have knocked out a dozen men if he had anything behind his punches. In the dressing room after the fight, Loughran laughed and said: "Don't talk to me about Carnera's punch. He hasn't any."

By the way, what was it that Primo hit Sharkey with that knocked the Boston squire so cold and stiff? Since that time Carnera has boxed 30 rounds without putting any one on the floor.

I think I got my biggest kick out of the fight in the early rounds watching Loughran feint the big man into a state of nerves. What on earth had the big fellow to be afraid of? And yet there he was flinching and jumping and jerking and stepping back. Several times when he had trapped Tom in a corner, Loughran would threaten him with his right and the giant would back away. Everybody could see that if Primo were one-tenth as terrible as he looked with his great bulk, his beady black eyes, and his awful mouth with the white tooth protector, he must batter Loughran half to death any time he chose to wade in and finish it.

But I suspect that Da Preem's looks are merely a front, a menace that covers a pretty good-hearted and unbelligerent big fellow. No true fighter dwells inside that hulk. If there did, no man could stand up to him for as much as three minutes. The dirty work that he did was an order from the corner. The occasional ferocity he showed didn't ring true. He will never live down the fact that for twelve rounds he played safe with a stingless man, 86 pounds lighter. You have no idea how incredibly foolish he looked.

You can't get away from that 86-pound pull in the weights. That is the difference in weight between a flyweight and a heavyweight. To think that Loughran could stand him off for 15 rounds is little short of miraculous—or is definite proof that Primo is, pugilistically speaking, a bum. At least that is what the ringsiders were howling at him during the fight as he missed punches, lunged wildly, roughed and wrestled and floundered about the ring. What an opportunity awaits Baer. He would be a sure thing to knock Carnera out if he were to get into shape and prepare himself. With his punch and his speed and his ability to take it, it would be the easiest touch in the world.

Loughran's stand in the last two rounds, when he was exhausted and too tired to protect himself, always will remain one of the great pictures of the ring to me. The little man, tired and dizzy, still fighting back weakly, outsmarting the crushing giant, bluffing him, still hitting at him, still making him miss punches that would have ended the fight had they landed, was a magnificent sight. Loughran didn't win the title for himself, but he certainly won it for the next good fighter who meets Carnera. He showed him up completely, once and for all.

Navy Matmen Will Oppose Oklahoma

Boxing With W. & L. Also Will Feature Card at Annapolis.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 2 (Spl.).—Naval Academy athletes will engage in another program of ten dual contests tomorrow, equally divided between varsity and plebe teams. Finis was written to the basket ball season last Saturday with the Army-Navy game played at West Point, but all Middie teams will be active except the varsity swimmers and poloists. All events will be staged here except varsity gymnastics with Springfield College at Springfield, Mass.

Wrestling bouts with the crack team of Oklahoma Aggies in the afternoon, and boxing with Washington and Lee at night, will dominate the card. The Oklahomans, wizards at the mat game and National champions last year, will have four individual title holders in their roster for the go against the Middies. They are Rex Perry, Ross Flood, Ralph Rasor and Alan Kelley, who grapple in the 118, 126, 135 and 145 pound classes, respectively.

Middies Unbeaten on Mat.

The visitors are strongly represented in the other weights. Coach Gallagher claims his team is about 25 per cent stronger than last year's outfit. The Middies have registered four victories and a tie in five star's and are in prime condition for tomorrow's match, though hardly entertaining hope of downing the Westerners. At any rate, the match should be a fine one. Two years ago the Aggies downed Navy, 20 to 8.

The day's carnival will get under way at 1:20 with two small-bore rifle matches, Navy varsity meeting University of West Virginia, and the plebes against McKinley High, of Washington. The other events will be run off in the following order:

At 2 o'clock—Swimming, plebes against Mercersburg Academy; water polo, plebes against Baltimore Y. M. C. A.; fencing, plebes against New York University freshmen.

At 2:30—Gymnastics, varsity vs. at Springfield, Mass., and plebes against East Side High, of Newark, N. J.

At 3:30—Fencing, varsity against New York University.

At 4—Wrestling, varsity against Oklahoma Aggies.

At 7:30—Boxing, varsity against Washington and Lee.

Whitey Langdon Dies; Renowned as Bettor

Miami, Fla., March 2 (AP).—George W. (Whitey) Langdon died here today of a heart attack. He had been in good health up to a few days ago, when he was taken to a local hospital. He was 60 years old.

Langdon is one of the old-time betting commissioners who 20 years ago was recognized as the biggest bettor in the East. He owned several prominent thoroughbreds, including His Majesty, which he sold to the late G. A. Cochran for $25,000. He also owned Flip Flap, a high-class race mare, which he disposed of for $24,000. He leaves a wife.

Baer's Talk Irks Pilots Of Champ

Campolo Match Likely; Loughran Is Bitter, Claiming Fouls.

MIAMI, Fla., March 2 (AP).—In the wake of the biggest financial flop since heavyweight championship boxing was a fugitive sport, ponderous Primo Carnera decided definitely today to make a fistic tour of South American capitals in an attempt to shake off the jinx that has kept him in bankruptcy since he won the title from Jack Sharkey.

Despite the fact some progress was made here toward reconciling the conflicting interests seeking to match the huge Italian in a title bout this June in New York with Max Baer, Carnera's manager, Louis Soresi, flatly declared negotiations for the Baer match would be dropped in favor of offers for matches in Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro and possibly Lima, Peru.

Seek Campolo Match.

"We are tired of collecting chicken feed and then being given the run-around on the one match—with Baer—that will mean real money," declared Soresi. "Carnera is through dallying with Baer, who goes around talking as though he and not Primo is the champion. We will leave the end of March for Buenos Aires and hope to get a match there with Victorio Campolo. If the Madison Square Garden promoters—who have shown so far they do not know how to promote—can sign Baer, we will be willing, if necessary, to fly back to the United States."

Gross receipts today were revealed as only $44,598.70 for last night's 15-round championship bout in the Madison Square Garden Stadium, where, between showers, Carnera bulled his way to a decision victory on points, but yielded prestige, popularity and glory to gallant little Tommy Loughran, who made an amazingly courageous stand against insurmountable physical odds and never once was knocked from his feet by his 270-pound opponent.

Only 8,624 Paid.

There were only 8,624 actual cash customers in an aggregate crowd of probably 12,000. The net receipts, after deduction of the Federal tax, totaled $39,361.60, a figure that marks the lowest ebb in heavyweight boxing since prize fighting was conducted by outlaw methods.

Carnera's financial situation hardly was much improved by his share, 37½ per cent, or about $15,000. The champion is already in bankruptcy and slated to appear in court in New York March 12 in a further attempt to untangle his affairs. Loughran's end amounted to 12½ per cent, or $5,000.

Garden Loses $30,000.

The net loss to the promoters may reach $30,000, the upshot of which is a revival of reports there will be a shake-up in the boxing organization of Madison Square Garden. The rumor has been circulated for some time that James J. Johnson, Garden matchmaker, will soon sever his connections, but neither he nor Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of the corporation, would discuss the matter before leaving today for New York. Kilpatrick took a plane North.

Blaming Referee Leo Shea and Carnera's tactics for his failure to win the title, Loughran today declared confidence in his ability not only to beat the huge champion, but stop him in a return match. The popular Philadelphian, however, is unlikely to get another crack at the Italian, under any circumstances.

Accuses Carnera.

Propped up in bed, his right foot bandaged as a result of damage caused when he was heavily stepped on by Carnera in the eleventh round, Loughran said: "Carnera's weight did not tire me so much as his illegal rabbit punches and back-hand blows to the head and neck. I did all the clean hitting. The only time I was in trouble was in the fourteenth round. I do not question the referee's honesty, but he did not carry out his threat to punish Carnera for foul or unfair tactics. He said beforehand he would disqualify the champion for stepping on me, but all he did was warn him."

Loughran, receiving more acclaim for his showing in defeat than Carnera did in victory, has no plans whatever for retirement and hopes

Miney Myerson Wins Fourth Straight Race, Equalling Hialeah Track Record

$5.40 Choice Leads From Barrier

Gift of Roses Second, Two Lengths Behind; Golden Fate 3d.

Two Tricks Victorious, Pays $30.40 Mutuel; Sturdy Ark Wins.

HIALEAH PARK, March 2 (AP).—G. W. Ogle's Miney Myerson, 4-year-old gelded son of Amberjack, in the silks of G. W. Ogle, remained one of the most consistent performers in the country after his flashy victory in the Tropical claiming handicap of 6 furlongs here this afternoon. With the track finally dried out to fast condition, the son of Amberjack equaled Coquel's track record of 1:10 1-5. Four of the better grade platers opposed the winner, with J. P. Ebelyardt's Gift of Roses taking the place two lengths behind. J. E. Smallman's Golden Fate was third, another four spans away. The winner was favorite, returning $5.40.

Running just as honestly and consistently for his present owner as he did before being claimed from Arthur Hullcoat, Miney Myerson now has four straight to his credit. He has been first or second in his last nine starts.

Ridden by Tipton.

Allen Tipton, who lost his apprentice allowance earlier in the week, had Miney on top throughout. The gelding jumped into the lead at the start and always held the speedy Gift of Roses safe. The latter, offering most contention from the break, drew well clear of Golden Fate in the stretch.

The King proved himself worthy of the heavy backing he received in the opening dash, making nearly all of the running and winning by a length and a half to return $5.20. Phantom Legion was 8 lengths before Battling Knight for the place. The latter succumbed early to the superior speed of The King and although Phantom Legion challenged for the final 3 furlongs, the winner easily held him at bay.

Little Lie Scores.

Maiden 2-year-old fillies cavorted in the second event and Little Lie, a first-time starter that had worked very fast, sped to a handy victory at better than 4-to-1. Taking an early lead, she held Gobet safe under Humphries smooth riding. Gobet rushed up fast and supplied chief contention. She had no trouble taking the place from Vicaress. Duncan's Leap was a heavily played fourth, swerving and being outrun.

Two Tricks played a trick on the talent in the third event. The daughter of Brooms won in easy fashion to pay $30.40. Happy Scot, one of the choices, trailed the winner by two lengths, while beating Dornoch by a length and a half for second money. Jimmy Hunter broke Two Tricks well, and the filly lost no time springing into a comfortable lead over Happy Scot, which never could menace the winner.

Jockey D. Bellizzi was suspended three days by the starter.

Sturdy Ark Victor.

Right after Starter Cassidy slapped a three-day suspension on Bellizzi, back comes the boy to win the fourth event astride the $4.20 choice, Sturdy Ark. Heiress was best of the other maidens in the race, having four lengths' advantage over Ahmed. Heiress broke on top in a bad start, which saw Reconnoiter left. Sturdy Ark was away a bit tardily, but moved up fast after leaving the back stretch. He gradually cut down the long lead held by Heiress and, taking command in the stretch, drew away.

Another J. E. Widener castoff was victorious, when Fair Joan, flying the J. A. Best colors, displayed sudden improvement and rare gameness to head the hot favorite, Toytime, in the sixth contest. Lofty Lady was a beaten off third. Fair Joan paid $10.10.

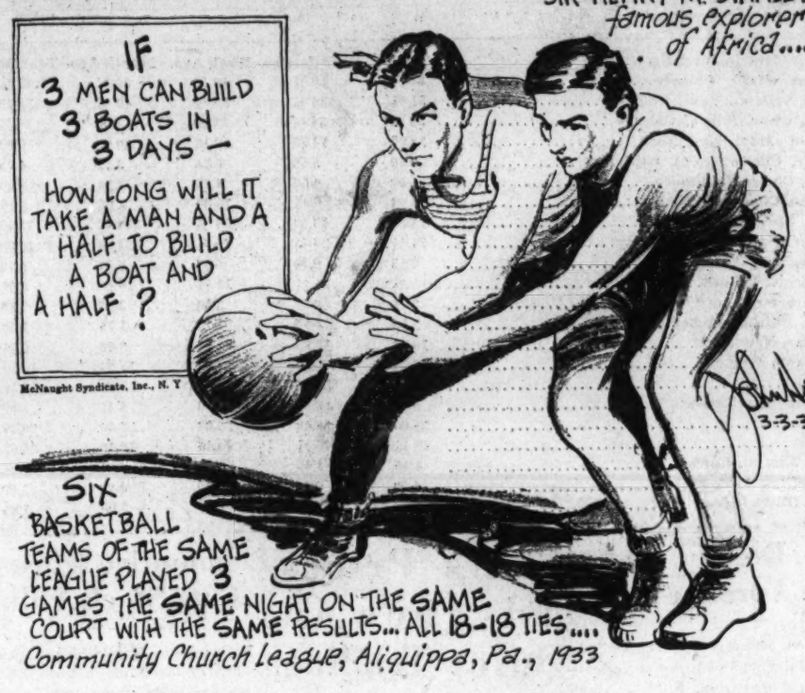
"AFRICA" IS THE ONE-WORD EPITAPH ON THE GRAVE OF SIR HENRY M. STANLEY - famous explorer of Africa....



McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

The grave of Sir Henry M. Stanley, famous as the explorer in Africa, bears his name, the date of his birth and his death, his African name, "Bula Matari," and the one word most descriptive of his accomplishments—"Africa."

In the problem above many people will give as the answer: a day and a half. This, however, is an error. From the statement that three men can build three boats in three days, it follows that one man could build one boat in three days, two men could build two boats in three days. Likewise, three men could build one boat in one day. In other words, it takes three man-days of labor for one boat.

If, however, one and one-half boats are required, it will take four and one-half man-days for the job. With one and a half men available, it will take three days for one and one-half boats. In short, half as many men can build one-half as many boats in a given time.

Each of the six teams in the Community Church Recreation Union League of Aliquippa played on the same night and each came out with the same score, 18, at the end of the regular game. The play in each game went to extra periods, deciding each of the games. After the extra periods, the scores were: St. Titus, 19; Mount Carmel, 21; U. P., 20; Baptists, 18; Bonnecamp, 18; Presbyterians, 20.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, March 2.

Bennings, Inc., managed to wiggle home three winners yesterday, each one loaded with chalk. Despite the fact that a $2 bet on my win horses would have broke you even to the penny, it was a good day. I lost the sixth by a head and the third by two lengths. Out of 21 picks, I had 14 in the pay. For the first time in many days, there was not a double scored by a jockey and Porter failed to take the main end of a purse. Little Dinah was only out for an airing in the nursery romp. We shall follow this maiden and line-up at the pay window very soon. Now that the fight is out of the way, the sun is out, so prepare for a long stretch of fast track. BILL.

First Race—Irene's Bob seems best suited of this group of sprinters and I expect Jimmy Hunter to bring this one sailing home. Crazy Jane is sharp as that recent victory and will be close at pay-off time. Terrier for the show award.

Second Race—I'm going to try to make Danny Meade win this with Cheka, a promising youngster. Hilise figures right with the top one and will make a battle of it. New Pin is reported to have worked well and may be close.

Third Race—Drombo gets a spring here that he may fancy. Has one winning effort to his credit hereabouts. Parity, with Gilbert in the saddle, will do a lot of running. Kindacorn for the remainder.

Fourth Race—Triangular is on edge for a sizzling race here and gets the call over the consistent and ever dangerous Hokuoa. Live One could awake with a bang in a field of this sort. Butter Beans, on an off track, would have a chance.

Fifth race—The Labrot Entry of Springstel and Monel gets the Bennings call in the feature. Either one can do it, I do believe. Sabula, with 100 pounds, consisting of Jimmy Hunter, figures to be dangerous, even among this kind. This horse is much improved.

Sixth race—Boy Valet did not run his real race last out and we will get some results here, it is my belief. Meade must ride a good race, however. Chance Flight will be in the money. Speedy Skippy to complete the money picture.

Seventh race—Momo finds a field to her liking in the final and should take care of these. Garlic finished like an express train last out. Brass Monkey, Polo Bar and Fairly Wild have been tipped often.

HEIRESS broke running, opened wide lead, saved ground and held on gamely. AHMED, well up, was kept on the outside all the way and finished fast. FOXIE SIS had plenty of speed for six furlongs, then tired. RECONNOITER was left.

Stocks Climb 1 to 3 Points In Late Rally

Technical Moves Credited With Rise; Turnover, 1,480,580 Shares.

New York, March 2 (AP).—A late rally saved stocks from a dull and featureless market today. As it was, leaders closed 1 to about 3 points higher, the result of a brisk upturn which in the last half hour put the tape a few minutes behind, though total sales amounted to only 1,480,580 shares.

Technical considerations seemed to have been a dominant factor in the recovery.

Through the earlier hours the market was firm and very quiet, showing most of its improvement in specialty sections. When General Electric Co.'s directors boosted the common dividend a nickel—to 15 cents from 10—and released the company's 1933 earnings—activity quickened and with the aid of lively covering prices moved up rapidly.

Upturn in Stocks.

The upward movement in stocks was broad. Rails and industrials were especially sought by buyers for both accounts. News developments proved generally favorable to both groups. Car loadings for last week having topped a year ago by 24.8 per cent, even though storms and the holiday contributed to a larger than seasonal decline. Motors and their related issues easily found the upward track, while steels were rather prominent.

Metals also hardened. Miscellaneous issues gaining 2 to 3 points included New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Allied Chemical, Motor Products, Timken Roller Bearing and Loose Wiles. Kelvinator, Snider Packing, Mack Trucks, Republic Steel, Pathe "A," Murray, Montgomery and Pierce-Arrow were other favorites.

General Electric's gentle lift in its dividend appeared to have been a surprise. The company did almost as well in 1933 as in 1932, earnings 38 cents a common share against 41 cents the previous year; in addition it reported that fourth quarter, 1933, billings were the best for any period since the second quarter of 1932.

Trade Upswing Resumed.

Publication of President Roosevelt's tariff message shortly after noon found the market quiet, nor did it make noticeable response to the picture of improving trade drawn by weekly mercantile surveys. Dun & Bradstreet's said the upswing had been resumed after last week's pause, and that the normal seasonal rise was to be supplemented this spring by Government plans for supporting the "waning CWA program" with special relief expenditure which "will bring more permanent betterment to a larger number of workers."

Labor difficulties, especially in lines connected with the automotive industry, appeared to be less on the markets' mind. Many of the large motor car manufacturers report large unfilled orders on hand; some have experienced a shortage of parts which has held back assemblies.

A year ago tomorrow was Friday, March 3, the eve of the banking holiday. The stock average closed that day at 46.4, bonds at 63.6. Today these figures were respectively 87.9 and 84.2.

Morgenthau's Testimony Should Remove All Doubt That Our Monetary Program Remains One of Experimentation, Manipulation.

By Ralph West Robey.

Secretary Morgenthau's testimony before the House Banking and Currency Committee, on Thursday, should go far toward eliminating the confusion that recently has existed in connection with our monetary policy. It was, in brief, a clear-cut declaration that we still are following a program of monetary experimentation—that there is nothing fixed or necessarily stable about the present valaution of the dollar in terms of gold—that we shall keep the 50-cent dollar only so long as it serves the purposes of the Administration—that even the present 50-cent legal limit for devaluation must not be taken as a minimum below which the Administration would hesitate to go.

Such a point of view obviously is almost directly contrary to the interpretations that generally have been made of our monetary policy during the last month. With few exceptions, in other words, it has been maintained in the news dispatches and in most editorial comment, that the devaluation of the dollar at the end of January more or less marked the end of currency experiments and monetary manipulation. The public has gained the impression, accordingly, that while it perhaps was true that we had not yet attained complete and final stability, we at least rapidly were working in that direction and future fluctuations would be narrowly limited.

President Reserved Right To Make Further Changes.

From the first it has seemed to me that such an interpretation was unjustified. In the first place, the President specifically reserved the right to make further changes in the gold content of the dollar should he decide that such action was advisable. Further, the restrictions and regulations governing the new value, quite obviously prevented the move from giving us anything that properly could be called even a "modernized gold standard" in the sense that the word "standard" always has been used in monetary discussions.

The testimony of Secretary Morgenthau, therefore, does not indicate a change of policy. Rather, it is a mere clarification of policy—a frank admission that our monetary program still is as uncertain and subject to change as it was before the devaluation of the dollar. More bluntly, it is an official announcement to the effect that any one who enters contracts or makes commitments in the belief that we have, or virtually have, a stable currency is acting on an assumption that is not warranted by the facts.

Statements Clearly Show This Is What Is Meant.

That this is not an exagerration of Mr. Morgenthau's testimony is clear, I think, if one looks at some of his statements. He says, for example, "we are on a day-to-day basis." Again: "What the future monetary policy of the country will be, I doubt any one is sufficiently wise to tell, because we have not had enough experience." And still again: "I am not saying if prices take a nose dive I won't be up here tomorrow pleading for a change."

It is difficult to see how the Secretary could make it much plainer that the present program is tentative, subject to change at any time, and viewed solely as an experiment. It likewise is difficult to see how he could say in any clearer language that the Administration does not know what it is doing and where it is going on the question of monetary policy.

Bond Market Renews Rise; Volume Gains

Traders Continue Hesitant; Sales Increase to $13,138,000.

New York, March 2 (AP).—While displaying no exceptional enthusiasm, the majority of bonds today managed to register small gains.

Trading was generally quiet, although the volume expanded appreciably in the last hour. Transfers totaled $13,138,000, par value, compared with the relatively low aggregate of $11,599,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was up three-tenths of a point.

Traders Still Hesitant.

Traders, for the most part, were hesitant. There was little news of especial interest to the market as a whole. The President's message to Congress asking for broad powers to adjust tariffs had been forecast.

Gains among corporation loans ranged from fractions to a point or none. There were a few sharp advances due to special circumstances. Bonds of Richfield Oil and Pan-American Petroleum jumped 4 to 7 points on announcement of plans for reorganization of the two companies.

Rails Hold Attention.

More attention was paid to the rails than to the other groups. The active carrier gainers included some issues of Alleghany Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific and Western Pacific.

American Water Works 5s rallied 2¼ points, American Rolling Mill 5s gained 2½ and New York Dock 5s were up 2⅞. Lesser advances were registered by loans of General Theaters, Goodrich, International Telephone, Montana Power, National Dairy, Paramount, Postal Telegraph, St. Joseph Lead, United States Rubber and Utilities Power & Light.

United States Government securities eased. Bond circles were awaiting the terms of the Treasury's March 15 financing. Foreign obligations were dull. Royal Dutch 4s gained 5½ points, and bonds of Germany, Dutch East Indies, Sweden, Japan, France and Lautaro Nitrate improved.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 2 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.).—The wool market continued very slow. Some inquiries were received, but few sales were closed, and the lines that did sell moved only in small quantities. The bulk of the demand was on original bag lines of 64s and finer territory wool and on 48s. 50s. ¼ blood domestic fleece and territory wools. Trading was generally slower than during the previous two weeks. Prices, however, showed no definite change in tone.

Philadelphia, March 2 (AP).—Stockholders of the Baldwin Locomotive Works yesterday approved the directors' proposal to reduce the stated value of the company's capital stock to $30,548,000 from $42,134,000.

This action will increase the surplus by $11,586,000, or the amount corresponding to the capital reduction.

Out of the capital surplus, directors plan to create a reserve of $8,000,000 to be used for effecting certain adjustments in the value at which various items of property, plant and equipment and investments are now carried on the books.

Of the reduced capital $20,000,000 will be allotted to the present 7 per cent preferred stock of $100 par value and $10,548,000 to the no par common stock.

Wheat Mounts On Plans to Foster Trade

Maximum Rise of 2 Cents Made and Market Closes Strong.

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Influenced to at least some degree by President Roosevelt's message about proposed reciprocal trade arrangements with other countries, grain values went sharply higher today.

Wheat scored a maximum rise of 2 cents a bushel, with the market showing pronounced activity and strength as the day drew to an end.

A good deal of inflation talk was current, and much notice was also taken of cables from Buenos Aires that beginning on Monday next the Argentine government would hoist the minimum wheat price paid to farmers.

Wheat Closes Strong.

Wheat closed strong at nearly the day's top figures, 1½ to 1⅞ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, 1 to 1⅜ up; oats, ⅞ to 1¼ advanced, and provisions showing 7 to 12 cents gain.

From the outset, the wheat market here displayed a notable upward trend, notwithstanding that domestic wheat territory, Southwest, had received additional moisture beneficial to crops.

Belief prevailed in various quarters that the grain exchange code would soon be approved at Washington, and that this would eliminate much of the uncertainty. That European continental countries were buying wheat at Winnipeg helped further to lift prices in Chicago.

Reports of Damages.

Friends of higher prices for wheat emphasized statements from milling sources that recent freezing and thawing weather east of the Mississippi River was causing increased complaints of damage to crops. Notice was also taken of advices that stocks of foreign wheat at the six principal European continental ports had been reduced today to 5,872,000 bushels, against 6,221,000 a fortnight ago with very little left at German and Italian ports, and with stocks of wheat in Russia believed to be small. Domestic primary receipts of wheat continued light, totaling scarcely more than half of the aggregate a year ago.

Corn and oats rose with wheat and as a result of active shipping demand here for corn.

Provisions were responsive to indications of a substantial decrease of Chicago stocks of lard this month.

South Africa Steel Work Seen Gaining

Final stages prior to actual production have now been reached at the new plant of the Iron and Steel Industrial Corporation, Ltd., at Pretoria West in the Transvaal, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache Samuel H. Day.

The coke ovens have already been fired and the first coke will be produced about February 1, the report states. Fires have also been lighted in the blast furnaces, which are slowly being brought up to maximum temperature. Train loads of ore from the corporation's iron mine at Thabazimbe are arriving at the steel works daily.

Along with the production of its first coke, the new steel plant will produce its first series of by-products, including benzol, tar, ammonia, and napthalene.

It is expected that South Africa's new industrial undertaking will turn out its first actual steel about the end of March, according to the report. When in full operation the works will employ about 1,200 men, the majority of whom have already arrived.

Oak Hill National Bank Reopens for Business

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 2 (Spl.).—By authority of the Federal comptroller of the currency, the First National Bank of Oak Hill opened its doors for business this week at Oak Hill as a reorganization of the old Oak Hill National Bank, which was closed in the National banking holiday a year ago.

The new institution is headed by C. W. Dillon, of Fayetteville, former State tax commissioner, as president. R. E. Kelly, of Oak Hill, is vice president and O. V. Wilson, formerly of the Charleston National Bank at Charleston, is the cashier.

The Bank of Rainelle, a State institution at Rainelle, was this week admitted to membership in the Federal Reserve System.

B.&O. Recalls 100 Men To Work at Line's Shops

Cumberland, Md., March 2 (Spl.).—One hundred men, embracing two units, were called back to work in the Baltimore & Ohio shops at Keyser yesterday. So scattered had they become since the furlough that the callers had trouble in locating many of them.

Traffic on the Somerset and Cambria branch of the Baltimore & Ohio has so increased that for the first time since 1929 men have been working at the shops at Somerset on Sundays and holidays. Furloughed men have been recalled and those already on the pay roll are working more hours.

U. S. Exports Of Instruments Decline in '33

The value of scientific and professional instruments exported from the United States declined 15 per cent in 1933 compared with the preceding year, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's Specialties Division. The totals for the two years were, respectively, $3,710,622 and $4,406,527.

Only two divisions of the professional instruments group recorded increases, the report shows. Exports of dental instruments and supplies increased from $879,329 in 1932 to $1,090,408 in 1933, and surveying and engineering instruments advanced from $40,923 to $70,566.

Foreign sales of American artificial teeth have declined since the peak year 1931, in which year exports reached a value of $1,922,346. The following year the total had fallen to $1,080,631 while shipments in 1933 amounted to only $613,602.

In the five remaining divisions of the professional instruments group, a continuation of the decline in exports was noted in 1933. Shipments of dental office equipment in 1933 and 1932 were, respectively, $119,494 and $134,750; sterilizers, $84,206 and $137,188; surgical and medical instruments, $136,506 and $190,933; surgical appliances, $281,481 and $410,113, and "other scientific apparatus and equipment," $1,314,579 and $1,532,660.

Tobacco Market.

Danville, Va., March 2 (Spl.)—The Danville tobacco market closed today with the barns scattered throughout this section denuded of leaf. Satisfactory prices paid this season caused the growers to sell out for the first time in many years instead of carrying over some curings to be aired for the next season. The outlook also, it is believed, was prompted by the uncertainties confroptins the farmer under a crop-reduction program now planned.

The average price started at a low grade in October, but stiffened in November and maintained a level well over the production price until a few days ago when the trade demand fell away, and the lack of competition was felt.

The growers of the surrounding country realized more than $8,000,000 in cash for the leaf they sold here, which was close to 47,000,000 pounds.

Overseas shipments were particularly heavy, and the foreign demand had much to do, according to dealers, with the satisfactory price situation.

Many growers will have to borrow money from next crop for cash to clear of them have liquidated old debts and have enough working capital on hand to start a new season.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Harris & Ewing Photos.

A Florida statesman and a typical young man and woman of that State in Government service. Left, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Jacksonville, has been prominent in the Senate 25 years. Center, Dan P. Mularkey, of Fernandina, works at RFC. He is secretary of the Florida State Society (fourth term). Miss Martha Norris McLeod, of Tampa, is employed at Information and Records Division, AAA. Miss McLeod, a niece of David Walker, who was Governor 16 years, is an author and leader of the younger social set on the West Coast. She is a good swimmer and dancer and likes to ride.

TODAY Florida passes by in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. And what an impressive array of interesting personalities we've found from that State in Government service! Florida, the land of sunshine and flowers, proudly takes her place in the parade and bids her sister States which have not as yet passed in review to come forward and show their wares.

BAKER.

The Diary takes a diagonal transcontinental jump for the next State in the parade—Washington—and goes still farther into the Northwest and includes Alaska on the same day. Washington State and Alaska people are closely united in the National Capital.

All Federal employes are invited to send in items about their home folk in Government service, so that each State will be fully represented in the parade.

Land of Flowers.

Of truth, a fairy "Feast of Flowers"
In which to while away the hours
Upon a warm and sandy beach
Beyond the chilling north winds' reach;
A land of citrus fruit, royal palm,
Of lakes and scenery, skies so calm;
Of forests and of everglades—
Where birds of bright hue fill the shades—
That's Florida, land of vacation
And robust health for all the Nation.

ON the bright Easter morn of 1513 Ponce de Leon and his band of Spaniards landed on Florida shores in search of the Fountain of Youth. Passing on through the years we see the arrival of such explorers as Miurelo, Cordova, Pineda, De Ayllon, De Narvaez and De Soto, then the building of a great State.

St. Augustine, oldest of American cities of European origin, was founded by Pedro Menendez in 1565. It is one of America's quaintest cities with its ancient cathedral, fort, city gates and sixteenth century Spanish buildings.

Passing through Spanish, French, English and again Spanish rules, we come to July 10, 1821, when Florida became a Territory with Gen. Andrew Jackson as its first military governor. In 1845 Florida was admitted as a State, and 15 years later seceded to join the Confederacy. The War Between the States closes and we find Florida back in the Union.

Then comes the building of an empire of vast citrus groves, internationally famous resorts, thousands of miles of highways and railroads, beautiful and modern cities, universities, ports—all under a climate unsurpassed.

Florida leads the world in production of grapefruit, exporting 10,000,000 crates in 1932. Its oranges are noted for their sweetness and are eagerly sought in the Northern markets. Its thousands of acres of truck farms furnish Northern tables with all kinds of green vegetables and fruits throughout the winter, strawberries being one of the prize crops.

There are more than 30,000 lakes in the State. It is estimated that tourists spend $250,000,000 annually in Florida. The State has about 5,450,000 acres of original pine forests. Cotton and pineapples are among its leading crops. Illiteracy among the whites is very low, the State having one of the best public-school systems in America.

Tribute to Jim and George.

Floridians are grateful to Col. James B. Hodges, of Lake City, chairman of the State Democratic executive committee, and George B. Hills, of Jacksonville, chairman of the Roosevelt preconvention campaign committee.

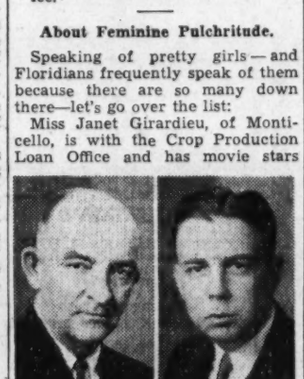
Since the campaign, both have worked hard to secure proper recognition of the merits of deserving Floridians seeking employment in the Government.

Among the vivacious Florida girls in Washington who have made a host of friends is Miss Louise Smallwood, of Pensacola. Miss Smallwood is employed at Public Health Service.

About Feminine Pulchritude.

Speaking of pretty girls—and Floridians frequently speak of them because there are so many down there—let's go over the list:

Miss Janet Girardieu, of Monticello, is with the Crop Production Loan Office and has movie stars looking to their laurels.



Harris & Ewing Photos.

Left, Maj. James O. Cassidy, of Jacksonville, is senior examiner at ICC. He has been in Government service since 1898 and helped build the Panama Canal. Right, Linton M. Collins, of Miami, is personnel director at NRA. He also is secretary of the State Democratic executive committee.

Miss Ida Blanche Walker, of Tampa, is one of the most popular girls at AAA.

Miss Grace Mirabella, of Tampa, is a pretty Latin type that Floridians (and others!) admire. Miss Mirabella is at PWA and is reported to be a very efficient stenographer.

Miss Edith Patti Pitts, of Tampa, is in the office of General Counsel, PWA. Miss Pitts has won a warm spot in the hearts of all who know her for her charm and genial personality.

Miss Kathleen M. Smith, of Marianna, stenographer in Legal Section, PWA, is one of West Florida's most beautiful gifts to the New Deal.

Miss Sadie Arbuthnot, of Orlando, adds both brains and beauty to the Legal Section of AAA.

Miss Gladys Powell (*), of DeLand, was for eight years secretary to the late Dr. Lincoln Hulley, of Stetson University. She is now employed in the executive offices of the White House. Miss Powell is a true representative of the intellectual type of Florida womanhood.

Alumnus of Warm Springs.

Richard I. Philpot, of Tampa, is a graduate of Warm Springs, where he formed a friendship with President Roosevelt. Buoyed up by the spirit of recovery (both physical and economic), Mr. Philpot is now one of the leading young executives in Government service, being assistant treasurer at Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Cheerful and blonde Miss Mary O'Connor, of Jacksonville, is one of the most efficient secretaries in Florida's Congressional delegation. She is with Representative Sears.

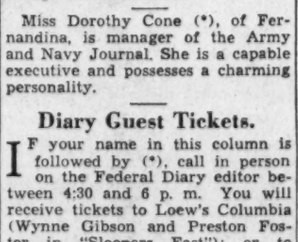
Three Famous Floridians

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Left, Herbert J. Drane, of Lakeland, is a Federal power commissioner. Mr. Drane served 16 years as Representative of the First District. Center, Cary A. Hardee, of Live Oak, banker and former Governor, is liquidating agent for closed banks of Washington. One of the richest counties in the State bears his name. Right, Rear Admiral Hutchison I. Cone, U. S. N, retired, of White Springs, is chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board. He served with Dewey at Manila, commanded the U. S. S. Utah at Vera Cruz and was injured in the World War in a fight with a submarine in the North Sea.



Harris & Ewing Photos.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Wynne Gibson and Preston Foster in "Sleepers East"); or to Loew's Palace (Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore in "Carolina"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, cast of 45 in "Artists and Models"; screen, Lillian Harvey in "I Am Suzanne"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

DAN P. MULARKEY, who is shown above as a typical young Floridian, came to Washington four years ago and almost immediately began getting his home folks together. With no organization to work with, Mr. Mularkey started his task and has been the hardest working organizer in State society circles.

He has been secretary of the society four times and nothing pleases him better than to have a Floridian pay his dues in the society. Credit for success for many dinners and dances are due to this energetic secretary. He knows more Floridians than a member of Congress and is a good speaker.

Mr. Mularkey hopes to gravitate back to Florida and go to Congress from his district some day. He was appointed to the RFC in its early days and now holds a responsible position there.

Fons A. Hathaway, of Tallahassee, is another of Florida's gifts to Gen. Johnson and the Blue Eagle. "Doc" is widely known as an assistant deputy administrator at NRA. He holds a Ph. D. He was chairman of the State road department during the boom period and is largely responsible for the splendid system of hard surface roads throughout the peninsula.

Miss Hilda Williams, of Lakeland, is assisting her old boss of Tallahassee days, Gov. Hardee, in straightening out the affairs of the closed banks here. She is one of the Florida girls making good in Washington and is said to be one of the most efficient court reporters in the State.

William T. Stockton, of Jacksonville, is assistant gerenal counsel of the Home Owners Loan Corporation. The name of Stockton labels a gentleman of the Old South.

Tribute to Fletcher.

In recognition of the great service he has rendered his State during the 25 years he has represented Florida in the Senate, Floridians in Washington will honor Senator Duncan U. Fletcher with a testimonial banquet Sunday night at the Washington Hotel.

Preceding the banquet there will be a reception at 7 o'clock. Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner and Gov. David Sholtz have accepted invitations.

Arrangements for the affair are being directed by a committee, including Frank J. Wideman, Assistant Attorney General; Cary A. Hardee, liquidating agent for the closed District banks; Herbert J. Drane, Federal Power Commissioner; Dan P. Mularkey, State society secretary, R. F. C.; and Hal P. Phillips, assistant secretary to Senator Fletcher. Reservations can be made through any of the committee members.

James W. Morris, of Tampa, is one of the best liked Floridians in Washington. He is an executive in Tax Division, Justice. He served with distinction in the World War and is a former commander of the Florida American Legion.

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Frank J. Wideman, of West Palm Beach, is the efficient 6-foot plus Assistant Attorney General and vice president of the Florida State Society. Mrs. Liza B Moncure, of Lake Worth, works at Indentification Unit, Justice. She is a member of the Mason family, of Gunston Hall, and has considerable talent in writing poetry.

Miss Caledonia McCall, of Alachua County, is dean of all Government employes from Florida. She has served in various Government departments for more than 30 years. When Miss' McCall received her Federal position, the Florida Legislature voted to send a memorial to President Theodore Rosevelt in her behalf. She is now with Employes Compensation Commission.

Widener Hope For Derby Is Chickstraw

Richard Johnson Winner Gained $14,790 for Stable in 1933.

NEW YORK, March 2 (U.P.).—George D. Widener's Chicstraw, best of three nominees, will be the one Trainer Andrew Jackson Joyner elects to sport the light and dark blue silks of the Philadelphia sportsman in the Kentucky Derby, if the Widener Stable has its colors up.

Chicstraw, a four-time stake winner in 1933, went to the post 14 times. The son of Chicle—Last Straw won seven races, finished second once and accumulated a total of $14,790 in purses. Kawagoe, a colt by Sickle out of Kawa, and Jack Low, a John P. Grier colt, were not as successful as their illustrious stablemate last year.

Chicstraw won such important tur fixtures as the Richard Johnson Stakes at Laurel, the Walden and Pimlico Handicaps at Pimlico and the Endurance Handicap at Bowie. He was the best 2-year-old that performed over the Maryland tracks last season.

Beaten Nose at Belmont.

Making his first start at Belmont Park over a muddy track, Chicstraw was only beaten a nose in a five-furlong sprint race. His next effort was in the National Stallion Stakes in which he met early interference and finished fourth.

Shipped to Saratoga late in August, the Chicle colt failed to finish in the money in his two races at the up-State track.

Returning to Belmont Park, the colt emerged from the maiden ranks in a 5½-furlong trial on September 7. He forced the early pace on that occasion and drew away in the final eighth of a mile. On September 12, at the Long Island course, he was badly beaten in a 6-furlong dash. He came back on September 16, however, and beat a formidable field over the 5½-furlong distance of the Widener course.

He was then taken to Maryland, where he proved the star of the season. Winning first crack out of the box at Havre de Grace, he failed to finish in the money in the Eastern Shore Handicap at the same track in his next start.

Won Richard Johnson.

Moving over to Laurel, he won the Richard Johnson Stakes on October 7. He was going away at the end of the three-quarters of a mile race, which was run in the fast time of 1:11 4-5. On October 28 he finished fourth in the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap, and followed that disappointment up with a clever victory in the Walden Handicap at Pimlico on November 4. He beat Discovery and Cavalcade in this mile and a sixteenth event.

Again, at Pimlico, Chicstraw was successful when he beat Time Supply in the Pimlico Handicap at 6 furlongs. He finished out the season with a sparkling triumph in the Endurance Handicap at Bowie on November 18. Time Clock and Bonanza were the runners-up in this race.

The colt went into winter quarters at the Widener Erdenheim Farm at Chestnut Hill, Pa., sound of body and limb, and is reported to be training well in preparation for his 3-year-old campaign. He is 20 to 1 in the futures.

Two for Shepherdstown.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 2 (Spl.).—Shepherdstown High School took a pair of wins here last night, the Midgets winning the opener from the Harpers Ferry aggregation, 15-13, and the Lowemen trouncing the Frederick (Md.) Mercos, an amateur independent team composed of ex-high school stars, 21-17.

Odom, Trainer, Ill.

Walt Mason, Himself

Rounded Up.

The bandits who, with joyful whoops, rode lately through the sunlit dells, are being rounded up in groups, and locked in dismal, grimy cells. And some, perhaps, will shortly sit upon the hot electric chair and their dishonored souls will flit to some bleak twilight Over There. And some will never walk again as freemen down the pleasant vales, or mingle with their fellowmen at baseball games and bargain sales. Whatever be their final fate, it will involve a deathless shame; no doubt they'll learn, and learn too late, that crime is but a losing game. And now again all honest gents may from the facts a lesson draw; they earn two dollars and ten cents in strict compliance with the law. Perhaps they'll never roll in wealth, they may approach the poorhouse steps; but they need never walk with stealth to dodge the sheriff and his deps. Perhaps they'll ride in cheap tin cars, but that is better far, my boy, than looking out through prison bars upon a world they can't enjoy. They can enjoy their golden dreams as they pursue their daily round: and they may fish along the streams and bring home catfish by the pound. And they may gambol on the moor, or hunting go for geese and ducks, and they may seek the pawnshop door when they would borrow seven bucks.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Moving Day By Harry J. Tuthill

GEORGE ISN'T IT STRANGE THAT THE WOMAN WHO LEFT THE LITTLE BOY WITH US DIDN'T AT LEAST PHONE ME THIS MORNING?
PEOPLE WHO THROW DAGGER PARTIES FOR HARD-BOILED PALS HAVEN'T MUCH TIME FOR LITTLE BOYS, I SUPPOSE.
I KNOW POSITIVELY THAT LIGHT-COMPLEXIONED CHILD DOESN'T BELONG TO THOSE SWARTHY PEOPLE.
IF HE DID, THEY WOULDN'T RUN AWAY FROM HIM EVEN DURING A FIGHT.
THE REASON THOSE PEOPLE SEEMED SO MYSTERIOUS IS BECAUSE, AS I TOLD YOU LAST NIGHT, THEY WERE CONCEALING THE BOY.
WHEN THAT WOMAN COMES BACK FOR HIM WE'LL CROSS-QUESTION HER.
GEORGE I HAVE A FEELING SHE WON'T COME BACK. ANYHOW I'M JUST GOING TO TAKE THE BOY WITH US TO THE OTHER HOUSE.
I THOUGHT ABOUT DOING THAT TOO AND... AH, HERE'S THE MOVING MEN NOW. AND WHAT BIG TOUGH-LOOKING BABIES WE DREW THIS TIME. H-MM!

THE GUMPS It Will Be a Cold Day

SAY — LISTEN — JUST BECAUSE — WE STILL HAVE UNCLE BIM — THAT DOESN'T MEAN THAT WE'RE MILLIONAIRES — THE WAY YOU ASK FOR MONEY AROUND HERE YOU'D THINK MONEY WAS WATER — WHAT DIFFERENCE WOULD THAT MAKE?
IF MONEY WAS WATER AND YOU OWNED AN OCEAN — YOU ARE THE KIND OF A HUSBAND WHO WOULD HAND YOUR WIFE A SIEVE AND SAY — "HERE HELP YOURSELF"
YOU KNOW WATER CAN BE CARRIED AWAY IN A SIEVE IF YOU WAIT LONG ENOUGH, DON'T YOU?
FOR PITY SAKES — HOW LONG DO YOU HAVE TO WAIT?
TILL IT FREEZES!

I CAME OUT TO THE SCENE OF THIS TRAGEDY AT NIGHT BECAUSE I WANTED TO BE ALONE. I'VE GOT SOME IDEAS ABOUT THIS MYSTERY I WANT TO FIGURE OUT BY MYSELF
AND WHAT'S THIS ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE HAYSTACK? FOOTPRINTS! A WOMAN'S FOOTPRINTS.. LEADING AWAY FROM THE HAYSTACK!
SOMEBODY WAS KILLED IN THE GAS TANK FIRE. BUT WHO? AND WHAT OF THESE FOOTPRINTS?
